Controversial pop icon Michael Jackson dead at 50

Michael Jackson, the moonwalking former child star known the world over as the "King of Pop" before his life and career deteriorated in a freakish series of scandals, died Thursday, a person with knowledge of the situation told The Associated Press. He was 50.

The person said Jackson died in a Los Angeles hospital. The person was not authorized to speak publicly and requested anonymity.

The circumstances of his death were not immediately clear. He was not breathing when Los Angeles Fire Department paramedics responded to a call at the home where he was staying about 12:30 p.m., Capt. Steve Ruda told the Los Angeles Times.

The paramedics performed CPR and took him to UCLA Medical Center, Ruda told the newspaper.

Jackson's death brought a tragic end to a long, bizarre, sometimes farcical decline from his peak in the 1980s, when he was popular music's premier all-around performer, a uniter of black and white music who shattered the race barrier on MTV, dominated the charts and dazzled even more on stage.

Jackson was perhaps the most exciting performer of his generation, known for his feverish, crotch-grabbing dance moves, his high-pitched voice punctuated with squeals and titters.

His single sequined glove and tight, military-style jacket were trademarks, second only to his ever-changing, surgically altered appearance.

Earlier Thursday evening, with speculation reaching a fever pitch, the Times cited city and law enforcement sources as saying Jackson had been taken to hospital by paramedics and was not breathing when they arrived at the mansion where he'd been staying.

Subsequent reports said Jackson was in a deep coma and that family members were gathering at his bedside.

Some unconfirmed reports said he'd suffered cardiac arrest.

Word of the sudden emergency, fuelled by rampant media speculation about the possibility of Jackson's death, brought a swarm of news helicopters to the air above the hospital and a growing mass of people on the grounds outside.

The tragedy struck amid a concerted effort by Jackson to resurrect his singing career after years of tabloid headlines, most of them relating to his sensational trial and acquittal on child molestation charges.

Earlier this year, a fit-looking, grinning Jackson held a brief news conference, surrounded by fans, to announce his impending comeback: a marathon series of massive back-to-back concerts in London.

Jackson's 1982 album "Thriller" — which included the blockbuster hits "Beat It," "Billie Jean" and "Thriller" — remains the biggest-selling album of all time, with more than 26 million copies.

Michael Jackson is survived today by Michael Joseph Jackson, Jr., Paris Michael Katherine Jackson and Prince Michael Jackson II.

City announces 19 drop offs, McGuinty calls for calm

A union official says the opening of 19 temporary dump sites in Toronto signals that the city is preparing for a long strike.

Mayor David Miller says there is some progress in negotiations and the union says it's more optimistic about the Toronto talks than the stalled situation in Windsor, where a garbage strike hit the 10-week mark Wednesday.

But Canadian Union of Public Employees Ontario president Sid Ryan says the temporary Toronto sites, which opened at 3 p.m. today, imply the city is "digging in for a long strike."

About 24,000 inside and outside municipal workers walked off the job in Toronto Monday, bringing garbage pickup to a halt and shutting down city-run daycares, parks and recreation programs, swimming pools and ferry service.

A key issue is the payout for unused sick days, a concession the city says it can no longer afford.

Premier Dalton McGuinty says people in Toronto shouldn't assume their garbage strike will last as long as the walkout in Windsor because each situation is unique.

McGuinty says each community has its own characteristics, and it's not fair to assume that because the Windsor strike has lasted so long that he's also prepared to let the same thing happen in Toronto.

But he adds the strike isn't "the end of the world," and both sides should be allowed to come to an agreement at the bargaining table.

McGuinty continues to call for patience and goodwill, saying he understands people's frustration as the garbage piles grow in sweltering heat in Toronto.

McGuinty says he'll pay close attention to any advice he receives from medical experts in the event the exposed trash becomes a hazard.

Flu closes Mount Sinai nursery

Flu Outbreak

PRECAUTION A Toronto hospital has closed one of its nurseries to new admissions after a number of babies were exposed to someone infected with swine flu.

The hospital's head of infection control, Dr. Allison McGeer, said none of the babies in the unit is showing signs of infection with the new flu virus.

For now, she said, Mount Sinai Hospital has decided against giving the infants the antiviral drug Tamiflu on a prophylactic or preventative basis.

McGeer said there were 15 or 16 infants in the Level 2 nursery when the person who later tested positive for the H1N1 virus was in the unit on Monday. Several infants have since been allowed to go home and there were 13 babies still in the nursery Thursday afternoon, she said.

Gearing up for Pride Parade this weekend

HEATHER BUCHAN
for Metro Toronto

He calls Toronto's Pride Parade "the single-most important public celebration of the LGBT community." And on Sunday, El-Farook Khaki, this year's Parade Grand Marshal, will be standing atop his float, complete with a marching contingent, guiding thousands of other participants along the downtown parade route.

"At the end of the day, when you distill our genders and our orientations and our class and our colour and our religions, ultimately we're just human," says Khaki of his float's theme, Human Positive. "It's also in reference to solidarity with all those people who live with HIV," he adds.

The 45-year-old Toronto-based immigration and refugee lawyer, who was born in Tanzania, but ended up in Vancouver as a youngster after his family fled political persecution in their homeland, was voted Pride Week's 2009 Parade Marshal in honour of his nearly two decades of human rights activism on issues including gender equality and sexual orientation.

When Khaki moved to Toronto in 1989 from Vancouver after graduating from UBC's law school, he experienced somewhat of a revelation. "I had never really known other people who identified themselves as Muslim and were also gay or lesbian or bi or trans," he recalls. "I thought, 'hey, I'm not the only one.'"

Two years later, Khaki founded the organization Salaam, with the purpose of bringing these people together and giving them a sense of solidarity and community, particularly for those who were especially isolated and without any sort of link to provide a social network, he says.

In 1993, the same year he came out to his parents, Khaki established his own law practice, focusing on refugee claims of people who had been discriminated against in their homelands because of their gender or sexual orientation. "Many of my cases are based on sexual orientation and gender and gender identity and HIV," he says. At the time, he says there was very little precedence for those types of refugee claims.

In the 26 years since then, Khaki has worked tirelessly on cases dealing with the persecution of sexual minorities and refugees living with HIV. "I'm really honoured to have been elected," he says of his role as Parade Grand Marshal. "The work that I've done in the community is really about building bridges and bringing people together across all lines."

Abuse risk factor for cancer?

HEALTH Physical childhood abuse appears to be a risk factor for cancer, a University of Toronto study says.

"It really surprised us," researcher Esme Fuller-Thomson said yesterday of the apparent link discerned from a statistical analysis.

The study, to be published July 15 in the American Cancer Society journal Cancer, does not suggest that physical damage to a child's body leads to cancer.

Rather, it suggests a correlation between psychological damage from childhood physical abuse and an elevated cancer risk in adulthood — a mind-body association that medical science can often be reluctant to explore.

Prolonged exposure to stress in childhood, preliminary evidence suggests, results in elevated levels of the chemical cortisol in adulthood and a compromised immune system.

TRANSIT A plan has been formed for Toronto to secure all the funding it needs for a $1.2-billion streetcar contract. The project for 204 streetcars, to built at Bombardier in Thunder Bay was contingent on securing a one-third share from Ottawa by Saturday. Last week, however, federal Transport Minister John Baird reiterated the streetcar project does not qualify for federal stimulus cash. Toronto Transit Commission spokesman Brad Ross says the commission will come up with $417 million itself. Ross tells Thunder Bay radio station CKPR the TTC will defer some of its capital spending until 2018 to make up for Ottawa's shortfall. Toronto Mayor David Miller has called an emergency meeting for Friday where council will decide whether to approve the TTC plan. "The streetcars are too important to the TTC and the City of Toronto," Ross said. "We needed to find another way to do this." The Ontario government has committed $416 million to the project. "This requires city council's approval and that's what we hope to achieve tomorrow." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toothache
Ontario dental assistants have a nagging toothache.

For five years, we've been working for the regulation of dental assistants. Regulation would mandate formal training for all dental assistants. But the Ontario government has postponed our review citing necessary cutbacks in a poor economy.

Postponing regulation is like putting off good oral care. Dental assistants take x-rays and are responsible for infection control. Yet many are still trained on the job in Ontario putting public health and safety at risk.

We will continue our fight to ensure that Ontario dental assistants become regulated one day. Meanwhile, to protect your family and preserve your oral health, ask if ODAA-certified dental assistants are working in your dentist's office.

Alcohol death rate at 3.8%

STUDY One in every 25 deaths worldwide can be linked to diseases or injuries related to alcohol consumption, concludes a Canadian-led study, which equates the libation's burden of harm to that of smoking almost a decade ago.

In 2004, the most recent year for which global statistics are available, 3.8 per cent of all deaths were attributable to alcohol (6.3 per cent for men and 1.8 per cent for women), the study found.

15 The former Soviet Union countries had the highest death rates related to alcohol, with a proportion of 15 per cent, or around one in every seven deaths.

Most of the deaths blamed on booze result from injuries, cancer, cardiovascular disease, liver disorders like cirrhosis and violence, say the authors, whose study is one in a series of papers on the global impact of alcohol published in The Lancet this week.

The high death toll attributed to alcohol is even more startling when viewed in the context of overall global consumption.

"Worldwide, more people abstain than drink," principal researcher Jurgen Rehm, a senior scientist at the Centre for Addiction and Mental Health in Toronto, said Thursday. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Melanie Bernard, left, glances over at the medical team as Kevin O'Connor reads a statement at a press conference at Sick Kids Hospital on Thursday. Bernard and O'Connor's three-and-half-month-old baby daughter Lillian O'Connor received a new heart on Tuesday, after being diagnosed with a rare congenital heart defect.

Bittersweet happiness

Parents of heart transplant recipient feel for other child

The parents behind the centre of a heart transplant drama said Thursday they were thankful for a "happy ending" after their frail baby girl finally received a new heart, while acknowledging the moment was bittersweet because another child died so theirs could live.

The parents of three-and-a-half-month-old Lillian O'Connor held hands tightly and wept as they said they're relieved their daughter is OK, but admitted it was difficult knowing what another family went through so she could have a chance to be healthy.

"It's hard to be up here and celebrate when we know that there's another family that's mourning at this moment, but we just want to thank them very much for their gift and their strength," said father Kevin O'Connor, who frequently paused to compose himself during a news conference at the Hospital for Sick Children.

He said the generosity of the donor family was overwhelming, calling it a gift his family could "never repay."

"It's hard to be up here and celebrate when we know that there's another family that's mourning at this moment."
Kevin O'Connor, father

He also thanked all the other families he had met at the hospital.

"We've shared rooms with people we've come to care about and we've watched their children go home with them, and unfortunately we've watched some of them pass away," O'Connor said.

"They will forever be in our hearts and in our minds."

Lillian, from Prince Edward Island, had been waiting for a heart since she was born. Her parents, O'Connor and Melanie Bernard, said their daughter is recovering well at the Hospital for Sick Children.

The hospital is where Lillian's parents first met the mother and father of baby Kaylee Vitelli, who suffers from a rare malformation of the brain.

In April, Kaylee's parents offered their daughter's heart, if she died, to Lillian.

The story created controversy for weeks as Kaylee's father Jason Wallace held daily media briefings outside the hospital.

But Kaylee recovered and a transplant was no longer an option, so she was taken home to Bradford, Ont., on May 14. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Flu vaccine rollout likely

'Immunization is our best protection': Chief health officer

Flu Outbreak

The decision about whether to undertake a mass vaccination of Canadians against swine flu has been all but taken, the country's chief public health officer said Thursday.

Dr. David Butler-Jones said given the behaviour of the new influenza A (H1N1) virus and the risk it poses, there is little chance Canada wouldn't push ahead with a vaccination program in the fall.

"At this point I cannot imagine not immunizing, given the nature of this disease, its variability and its risk to people, both in terms of illness but also serious illness and death," Butler-Jones said in an interview with The Canadian Press.

"It is a new virus, so most of us have no or very little immunity against it. And so immunization is our best protection."

As of Wednesday the World Health Organization reported nearly 56,000 people around the world have had laboratory-confirmed cases of swine flu and 238 people have died.

In Canada, more than 6,700 confirmed cases have been reported and 22 deaths have been linked to the disease.

A number of countries have placed orders with flu vaccine manufacturers for swine flu vaccine, which will take several months to produce.

Butler-Jones said safety trials of the new H1N1 vaccine will have to be conducted. And Canada's vaccine regulator, a branch of Health Canada, will have to study data from the trials to make sure the vaccine is safe and induces an immune response.

He said Canada is on target to start vaccinating against the swine flu in late October.

B.C. court denies appeal for killer Robert Pickton

CRIME Murder convictions against Robert Pickton have been upheld by the B.C. Court of Appeal, but the serial killer's case could still be heading to the Supreme Court of Canada.

In a 2-1 decision, the B.C. Appeal Court rejected claims by Pickton's lawyers that the trial judge made numerous significant errors when reading instructions to the jury.

In a second ruling, this one on a Crown appeal, the judges were unanimous in agreeing that if another trial comes about through a Supreme Court referral, then such a second trial could be on six or 26 counts of first-degree murder.

Though convicted of six counts of second-degree murder for killing six women, Pickton has also been charged with 20 other counts of first-degree murder, but he has not been tried on them.

Government intervention must be watched: Manley

ECONOMY Former Liberal deputy prime minister John Manley says growing government economic activism since the recession needs to be watched to ensure it does not stifle business competitiveness.

Manley made the comments Thursday after being named the new head of the Canadian Council of Chief Executives, one of the country's most influential business lobby groups.

"We have to make sure regulation is intelligent."
John Manley

"It's clear we are moving into a phase of real activism on the government side, and that's OK," Manley said. "But we have to make sure regulation is intelligent, not dumb, and as we get out of the deficit, that tax levels remain reasonable and competitive."

Manley becomes the second former federal cabinet minister to take charge of a major business association in the past year, joining Brian Mulroney-era minister Perrin Beatty, who heads the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

Iran protesters face official linked to Kazemi's death

Canada is worried Iran's probe of detained dissenters is in the hands of an official linked to the death of a Canadian journalist.

IranCrisis

Saaed Mortazavi was linked to the arrest, torture and murder of Canadian photojournalist Zahra Kazemi in 2003.

Foreign Affairs Minister Lawrence Cannon says Mortazavi has repeatedly shown his disregard for human rights.

"We are deeply concerned ... that Saaed Mortazavi has been put in charge of the investigation.
Lawrence Cannon

Mortazavi is a former judge and one of Iran's most feared prosecutors, known for shutting down newspapers and jailing journalists.

Iran has put him in charge of interrogating people arrested in the aftermath of its much-challenged election. "We are deeply concerned by reports that Saaed Mortazavi has been put in charge of the investigation of detained reformist leaders and party officials in Iran," Cannon said Thursday.

Cannon said two Iranian investigations confirmed that Mortazavi ordered the illegal arrest and detention of Kazemi.

Stephen Harper takes questions after naming Halifax's Pier 21 as a national museum.

New role for historic pier

IMMIGRATION Halifax's Pier 21 has been named a national museum.

It's only the second museum outside Ottawa to be given the designation.

Prime Minister Stephen Harper made the announcement Thursday after touring the museum at the pier — a point of entry to Canada for more than a million immigrants.

Harper said the designation recognizes immigrants' contribution.

"No country … has benefited more than Canada from free and open immigration," he said.

Feds drop planned legislation on veils

ELECTIONS The federal government has quietly dropped the idea of forcing veiled women to show their faces if they want to vote in Canadian elections.

Steven Fletcher, Canada's minister of state for democratic reform, confirmed Thursday the government has no plan to proceed with the legislation.

"We have other priorities," he said.

The issue came to a boil in 2007 during three hotly contested federal byelections in Quebec.

Feds make appeal to premiers

Ottawa doesn't want province to discriminate against U.S. suppliers: Day

The federal government is asking Canada's premiers to sign a declaration that their provinces won't discriminate against American suppliers as a carrot to convince the U.S. to drop protectionist measures.

Trade Minister Stockwell Day said in an interview Thursday that federal and provincial officials discussed the issue on Monday and that the premiers have been given a draft procurement agreement that would act as an adjunct to the North American Free Trade Agreement.

Stockwell Day

The draft would tie the provinces to the same rules as the federal government on government-let contracts.

In recent months, Canadian companies have been hurt by Buy America measures passed in Congress that compel states and municipalities receiving billions of federal infrastructure dollars to buy exclusively from domestic suppliers of steel and many manufactured goods. Several Canadian firms have complained.

SEAN KILPATRICK/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Gen. Walt Natynczyk, Chief of the Defence Staff, greets Cpl. Mike O'Rourke as his wife Krystal looks on following an event to announce the Canadian Forces Mental Health Awareness Campaign at National Defence Headquarters in Ottawa yesterday.

Forces launch drive for mental health

MILITARY Cpl. Mike O'Rourke fought his way through the sun-baked grape fields of Panjwaii in 2006.

Charging into merciless Taliban machine gun fire, he retrieved wounded and dead buddies.

It was the landmark battle Operation Medusa and the beginning of what was — by his own admission — the worst of three years of his life. He has suffered a recurring hell of depression and anxiety.

"Even though a lot of my symptoms will never go away, I have started to see light at the end of the tunnel," said O'Rourke, who served the 1st Battalion Royal Canadian Regiment battle group. He wears the country's third-highest decoration for bravery, the Medal of Military Valour.

His voice quaked as he haltingly told his story and tearfully thanked his "biggest rock" — his wife — for "doing everything in her power" to make sure he came through every day with a smile on his face.

> "Even though a lot of my symptoms will never go away, I have started to see light at the end of the tunnel."
> Cpl. Mike O'Rourke

It's that kind of emotion that the Canadian military said it's hoping foster from stressed and troubled soldiers, sailors and aircrew, who should not have to suffer in silence, the country's top commander said Thursday.

The chief of defence staff, Gen. Walt Natynczyk, officially launched the military's mental-health awareness campaign, an initiative prompted in part by the release last week of a House of Commons committee report on post-traumatic stress disorder.

News in brief

DAYCARE A new poll suggests the majority of Canadians would like their provinces to follow Ontario's lead and combine daycare and kindergarten into a single full-day program, a wish the plan's author says can easily be fulfilled. A Canadian Press Harris-Decima survey found 71 per cent of respondents said the plan for four and five year olds was either a good or very good idea. Ontario's plan was popular among women between the ages of 35 and 50. The Ontario government plans to start phasing in optional, all-day kindergarten in 2010.

COURTS A Canadian soldier charged with fatally shooting a fellow reservist in Afghanistan was playing a game with a loaded weapon when the firearm went off and killed his comrade, the lead prosecutor in a court martial told a military panel Thursday. Lt.-Cmdr. Robert Fetterley made the assertion in his opening statement to the panel hearing the case of Cpl. Matthew Wilcox of Glace Bay, N.S., who has pleaded not guilty to manslaughter, criminal negligence causing death and negligently performing his military duty.

Not a wrap on Kerry's movie plans

The U.S. Federal Election Commission failed to reach a decision Thursday on former presidential candidate John Kerry's request to use $300,000 US from his campaign funds to invest in a documentary about injured Iraq war veterans. Ahmadinejad rips Obama, Mousavi refuses to quit

IranCrisis

Iran's embattled opposition leader vowed Thursday that he wouldn't back down from challenging what he called a rigged presidential election despite the regime's increasing attempts to isolate him, telling the hardliners: "I won't leave the picture."

Incumbent President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad, proclaimed the landslide winner of the balloting, accused U.S. President Barack Obama of meddling in Iran's affairs. "Correct yourself," he told the U.S. leader, urging him to "show your repentance."

On his website, opposition leader Mir Hossein Mousavi levelled unusually strong criticism at the Islamic regime's leaders, saying they were "the main factor for the recent violence and unrest and have spilled the blood of the people." His allegation came nearly a week after supreme leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei warned the opposition to end street protests or be held responsible for any "bloodshed and chaos."

Khamenei has refused to order a new vote despite the biggest demonstrations in the country since the 1979 Islamic Revolution.

"I am not ready to withdraw from demanding the rights of the Iranian people," Mousavi said, adding that he was determined to prove electoral fraud.

"They are not aware that I won't leave the picture with these accusations," he said.

Authorities arrested 70 university professors Wednesday after they met with Mousavi, and all but four were later released, his website said.

Those still in custody included Qorban Behzadinejad, Mousavi's former campaign manager.

State media reported that in addition to the 17 protesters killed in the unrest, eight members of the pro-government Basij militia were killed and dozens more wounded by weapons and knives.

The reports could not be independently verified.

Khamenei has unleashed the Basij and the feared Revolutionary Guard, authorizing them to use whatever force is deemed necessary to squelch dissent.

Hamas chief welcomes Obama's 'new language'

MIDDLE EAST The top Hamas leader on Thursday welcomed what he said is "new language" by U.S. President Barack Obama toward the Islamic militant group — part of Hamas' cautious outreach to Washington in recent weeks.

In a televised speech, Hamas chief Khaled Mashaal avoided any mention of the recent turmoil in Iran, even though the Islamic militant group is backed by the Tehran regime. Earlier Thursday, Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad accused Obama of meddling because of growing U.S. criticism of Iran's clampdown on opposition protesters. Iran's other militant ally, the Lebanese Hezbollah group, has sided with Iran's ruling clerics.

"It is the first step in the right direction"
Hamas leader Khaled Mashaal on U.S. efforts

Hamas has been trying to reach out to the Obama administration in hopes of breaking out of its international isolation and prying open the borders of blockaded Hamas-ruled Gaza.

The U.S. and Europe consider Hamas a terror group and have said they will only engage if Hamas recognizes Israel and renounces violence. Hamas has rejected those conditions, saying it cannot make such concessions up front. In a speech to the Muslim world earlier this month, Obama insisted that Hamas meet the conditions, but also suggested the group could play a political role in the future.

Mashaal on Thursday praised what he described as "Obama's new language towards Hamas."

"It is the first step in the right direction toward a dialogue without conditions, and we welcome this," he said. However, the Hamas chief-in-exile also said Obama remains too sympathetic toward Israel, despite the president's pledge to work hard for the establishment of a Palestinian state.

Mashaal railed against Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, who said in a recent speech that Israel would retain sovereignty over all of Jerusalem, keep building in Jewish settlements and demand Palestinians recognize Israel's right to exist as a Jewish state. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Their cheatin' hearts: A political pattern?

ADULTERY It seems as American as apple pie — male politicians busted for cheating on their wives and forced under the glare of the national spotlight to deliver humiliating on-air confessions and apologies.

South Carolina Governor Mark Sanford, a Bible-quoting conservative considered a rising star among Republicans, is the second prominent politician in his party to find himself at the centre of a sex scandal in recent weeks. Sanford's confession came a week after another Republican 2012 presidential hopeful, Senator John Ensign of Nevada, admitted his own extramarital affair.

But Republicans are hardly alone in stepping out on their wives — and getting busted for it.

Former Democratic president Bill Clinton famously declared in 1998: "I did not have sexual relations with that woman" amid allegations he'd cheated with White House intern Monica Lewinsky. Months later, facing impeachment, he confessed to an "inappropriate" relationship with the 21-year-old.

The career of John Edwards, John Kerry's running mate in 2004, is in shambles after his affair was revealed last summer. The North Carolina politician has denied fathering Rielle Hunter's baby, but even his dying wife says she's not sure she believes him.

Stephen Hess, a longtime observer of American politics and a former aide to former president Richard Nixon, says cheating seems to be a condition of the powerful all over the world, not just in the U.S.

"I don't think the genetic condition of American male politicians is much different than French or Italian or British or Canadian — men of power always seem to have some proclivities that way," Hess said.

Resignation?

- Mark Sanford was facing calls for his resignation Thursday following a stunning confession a day earlier about his mysterious disappearance last week.

Italy retracts Iran invite

IRAN Italy on Thursday called for a tough message against Iran's violent crackdown on protesters as it prepared to open a meeting of foreign ministers of the industrialized Group of Eight nations. Rome had originally invited Iran as a special guest, arguing that Tehran could have an important role to play in stabilizing Afghanistan — a key focus of the meeting. But Rome retracted the invitation after Tehran failed to respond and after days of clashes with demonstrators protesting Iran's disputed elections. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Movement spreads

Countries legalizing gay marriages, unions

MAUREEN LITTLEJOHN
for Metro Canada

In the last eight years, same-sex marriage has become legal in seven countries. The first ceremonies were performed in the Netherlands in 2001. Belgium followed in 2003, Canada and Spain in 2005 and South Africa in 2006.

The most recent countries to allow same-sex marriage are Norway, which introduced the law in 2008, and Sweden, in May of this year. Same-sex-marriage is recognized, but not performed in Israel, Aruba, the Netherlands Antilles, Washington DC, and New York state.

"This train is moving. In fact it's unstoppable," says Cary Johnson, executive director of the International Gay and Lesbian Human Rights Commission, based in New York City.

Johnson notes, however, that there has been some backlash. "Latvia, Congo, and Uganda have passed constitutional amendments banning same-sex marriage, even though such marriages were already technically impossible in these countries. The East African nation of Burundi just implemented a law criminalizing homosexuality."

For gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender people, the battle for same-sex marriage is emblematic for the struggle for equality, notes Johnson. "What could be more human than to want to have your primary relationship recognized by the state and society?" he says.

TARA TODRAS-WHITEHILL / THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

An Israeli man walks behind a pride flag before the gay pride parade in Jerusalem Thursday.

Many countries that don't recognize gay marriage allow civil unions and registered partnerships. Denmark was the first to grant same-sex civil partnerships in 1989 with most of the same rights as marriage. In Croatia, partners who have shared a residence for at least three years are recognized as a civil union. German couples have been able to register as life partners since 2001 and rights include second parent adoption.

Gay and lesbian Icelanders have registered partnerships with the full rights of marriage, including adoption. The U.K. has given registered couples all the rights of married heterosexual couples since 2005.

Other countries that recognize civil unions and partnerships are Finland, Portugal, Switzerland, Hungary, France, Luxembourg, and some regions of Mexico, the U.S., Argentina and Australia.

‘Rights’ vs. ‘rites’ wrong

Rabbi Irwin Kula
Guest Columnist

During every cultural war, people of this country use religion to legitimize and re-affirm their pre-existing political, moral and psychological agendas.

Such is the case with gay marriage. Conservatives and liberals — the “rites” vs. “rights” groups — each cite various religious texts and values to support their own views.

Each side sincerely believes that by legitimizing their views with religious sources, they wield the ultimate trump card. However, this tactic merely renders religion irrelevant and ensures it does not contribute desperately needed wisdom to the public conversation. Neither side of this debate has been true to their professed values.

The “rites people” do not really care about the sanctity of marriage and the unconditional love and commitment to family values that such rites express and witness.

They are “freaked out” by the love shared by two people of the same gender, so they offer a hysterical, angry view that gay marriages will somehow undermine heterosexual marriages and family values.

If the “rites people” really believed society was better off when people committed to stay together, they would celebrate that more people in this country want to be in binding monogamous relationships. On the other hand, the “rights people” are equally hypocritical. Rather than worry about the label of marriage, which evokes fiery opposition, the “rights people” should concentrate on ensuring that every single legal right straight married couples share is mandated for similarly committed gay couples. But as much as they care about rights, they are really “freaked out” by not having the affirmation of those who oppose them. They believe this affirmation will come with obtaining the legal right to call their relationship “marriage.”

Instead of fixating on the rhetorical victory of the “marriage” label, they should focus on emptying the label of its content. Progress on human rights is always too fast for some and too slow for others.

Ultimately, equality comes not simply by fighting against each other, but from living together as family and friends and inevitably realizing that our differences are merely the mystery of life unfolding in all its variety. This movement is unstoppable, and paradoxically the rights and rites that now divide us will, in the end, bind us as a nation.

Toronto needs to keep cool over strike

UrbanCompass

John Sewell
metronews.ca/sewell

My advice to Toronto residents about the civic strike: relax.

Why waste energy on something you can’t change?

The breakdown in relations between the city leaders and two large unions representing city staff is not much different than a marital collapse. The parties have separated for five days now and are living apart. Each party thinks the other one is deluded, foolish, dishonest, and/or untrustworthy and neither is about to give the other respect. The last thing they want to do is talk about how they can sort out their differences.

Sure, you can take sides. You can say that the union is wrong to defend the existing arrangement which gives them up to eighteen sick days a year, days that if not taken can be accumulated and partially used as a payout on retirement. Maybe this is the way public employees like police and fire fighters are treated, but few other working people have these benefits.

You can say the city’s leaders, who gave themselves a raise without many questions and are now paid almost $100,000 a year, should have been promoting better relations with staff during the past year or two so that negotiations didn’t lead to a breakdown.

But that too is like blowing in the wind.

A strike means the normal rules no longer hold. Who knows how long it will last? What event will finally tip the parties into looking for an agreement? What will happen to political careers? Will more city services be privatized in the future? We don’t know.

All of us on the outside are without the power or influence to put this broken Humpty Dumpty together again. This is a fact of life that personal anger won’t change.

In the heat of the early summer sun, for what it’s worth I say the rational strategy for us is simple: just cool it.

Marriage is not a standard for gays to measure themselves

Re: Metro’s Same-Sex coverage

As someone who marched in many gay rights marches back in the 1970s, I would like to take issue with your coverage of the same sex marriage issue. You would appear to take it as a given that all in the gay community are automatically in favour of same-sex marriage and view it as an important civil right, with only the most intolerant and prejudiced homophobes fighting against it. The truth is otherwise. In the 1970s, same-sex marriage was a non-issue for gay activists, and coming out a gay person meant accepting your identity and rejecting empty institutions (like) marriage.

We need to focus on true self-acceptance and not be fooled into thinking that the right to same-sex marriage is ultimately the true reflection of that.

Khamenei does not speak for Iranians anywhere

Re: Iran says vote will stand (June 25)

We (Iranians-Calgarians) really appreciate Metro Canada for keeping people up to date with Iran’s crisis news. But I have one issue about a headline in today’s paper. I got so frustrated when I saw this title “Iran says vote will stand.”

Who thinks (Ayatollah Sayyed Ali) Khamenei is equal to Iran? He is not even an Iranian.

Credit markets thaw

Easing conditions will boost auto sales: Report

Easing credit conditions are making it easier for consumers to buy new vehicles and should boost auto sales in the second half of the year, according to a new report by Scotia Economics.

The bank's global auto report, released Thursday, says Canadian auto loan approvals have increased to the highest level since April 2008. Study author Carlos Gomes said this provides evidence that credit markets are starting to thaw after freezing up in response to the financial crisis in late 2008.

This has been aided by Ottawa's move to buy up to $12 billion in securities backed in part by loans and leases on vehicles, which was launched last month, Gomes said.

He said the withdrawal of some major lenders from the auto-loan business over the past year had dampened credit availability, although the Bank of Canada indicates auto loans at chartered banks in Canada have been readily available.

Judge OKs GM to use $33.3B funds

AUTOS A bankruptcy judge ruled Thursday that General Motors Corp. can have access to its full $33.3 billion US in bankruptcy financing. Judge Robert Gerber gave final approval to the financing after he had given preliminary approval earlier for GM to use $15 billion.

The billions in U.S. and Canadian government financing is intended to keep the automaker going until it can sell its assets to a new company and emerge from Chapter 11.

The U.S. government will take a 60 per cent stake in the new company, and the Canadian government would get 12.5 per cent. The UAW union and unsecured bondholders would own the rest.

More newlyweds discuss finances to avoid discord

RECESSION The economic recession is convincing more newlyweds to discuss financial compatibility before they walk down the aisle in a bid to avoid a leading cause of discord and divorce, say financial advisers.

"A bright light in all of this pullback is that people are now starting to think twice and not jumping off as blindly as before," says Jeannette Brox, a certified financial planner with the Investors Group.

With young people more at risk of losing their jobs and fears mounting about debt, many young couples have become more cautious about spending that has loaded many with high debt, she said from Toronto. People have responded by dramatically adjusting their lifestyles. In the U.S., the savings rate has jumped from negative to nearly six per cent.

Frank Wiginton of TriDelta Financial said the biggest mistake couples make is not talking about money and sharing their goals.

Toronto takes DeRozan in first round

BASKETBALL The Toronto Raptors selected Southern California guard DeMar DeRozan with the No. 9 pick in the 2009 NBA draft Thursday.

The six-foot-seven, 211-pound DeRozan is considered one of the players with the most potential in this year's draft. He played just one season at USC and he showed marked improvement over the course of the season, leading the Trojans to the Pac-10 title and earning tournament MVP honours. He averaged 13.9 points and 5.7 rebounds a night.

The 19-year-old DeRozan has said entering the draft was a difficult decision, but he opted to leave USC after one season to help support his mom who is struggling with Lupus.

Oklahoma forward Blake Griffin went No. 1 overall to the Los Angeles Clippers. Connecticut centre Hasheem Thabeet went second to the Memphis Grizzlies, while Oklahoma City selected Arizona State guard James Harden third. Memphis guard Tyreke Evans went fourth to Sacramento, followed by Spanish guard Ricky Rubio to the Minnesota Timberwolves.

Canada's all-star coaching staff

MATTHEW WUEST

Hockey has been described as a game of inches, but Mike Babcock is looking at it as a game of 200 feet.

Officially unveiled yesterday as head coach of the Canadian men's hockey team for 2010 Olympics in Vancouver, Babcock discussed his blueprint for the team — one that is committed without the puck and plays the full length of the rink.

In other words, don't expect to see many one-dimensional players on the list when Babcock and his staff unveil the 44-man summer selection camp roster in the next 10 days.

"We're not looking to bring apples and make oranges," the Detroit Red Wings head coach said in a conference call yesterday. "We're going to bring the guys who do on a regular basis what we expect the Canadian Olympic team to do."

Babcock sat down with assistant coaches Ken Hitchcock, Lindy Ruff and Jacques Lemaire on Wednesday night and reviewed a list of selection camp candidates assembled by general manager Steve Yzerman over the past season.

Some of the hardest decisions will be down the middle. Sidney Crosby, Mike Richards, Vincent Lecavalier, Joe Thornton, Eric Staal, Ryan Getzlaf and Marc Savard are just the beginning of the star-studded list of centre-ice talent.

But Babcock said he won't hesitate to pick more centres and have them play out of their natural position.

"Steve (Yzerman) played on the wing in 2002 and he was a centre his whole life," Babcock said. "Good players just play the game and understand how it should be played."

While there will be plenty of emphasis placed on the summer camp, the staff will spend the first part of 2009-10 evaluating players, particularly younger ones.

Canada's staff will make the ultimate call, but Babcock said it's up to the players to prove their worth.

"They're going to decide who's on the team," he said.

Hockey Hall of Fame should use broader criteria

It's hard to argue with the players who've just been selected to hockey's Hall of Fame. Leetch, Yzerman, Robitaille and Hull. It doesn't get much better than that.

But where's the magic?

Where's the imaginative touch distinguishing the institution as something more than a place where those who've accumulated the best numbers over their careers find the key to unlock the door?

Hockey is the ultimate team game. Why isn't there a willingness to include the teams that have defined the sport for many generations of fans?

One could think of both squads that played in the 1972 Summit Series, a confrontation that assumed an exalted meaning for the game and for the time in which it was played. The gritty Canadians persevered, but the surprising Soviets served notice that they were a force to be reckoned with.

It was the most famous set of games ever played. It featured three consecutive game winning goals by one player, Paul Henderson, whose name is familiar with most fans. Yet, neither the team nor the player is included in the Hall of Fame.

The "Miracle on Ice" Americans who won the Olympic gold medal at Lake Placid in 1980 are not in the Hockey Hall of Fame. Yet their improbable victory against the seemingly indestructible Soviet Union is the stuff of legend.

Hockey is about more than just individuals who score the most goals or win the most Stanley Cups. It is about mythology and tall tales. It should be about the characters that have made the game great and wonderful.

To that end, the Hockey Hall of Fame needs to be more inclusive, indeed imaginative, in selecting those who reside in the shrine for all time.

Not only should the great teams merit consideration but so too should the women who have pioneered a boom crossing the lines of gender. Players like Angela James and Cassie Campbell.

And one more thing, love him or hate him, Don Cherry is the most famous person in hockey. He is a character who has forged much of hockey's folklore.

These are the kinds of people who should gain entry to hockey's Hall. Their inclusion would ensure that all of our memories of a beloved game are filled with magic.

Beat of the Blue Jays

Popular Rogers Centre fixture fell into the gig 20 years ago

MATTHEW WUEST
matthew.wuest@metronews.ca

Sunny Side

It's like clockwork. If you've ever walked along the south side of Rogers Centre before a weekend Blue Jays game, you'll understand.

For the last 20 years, since the opening of the stadium formerly known as SkyDome, there's been a familiar drum beat that echoes outside the ball park. That beat belongs to Rick Donaldson.

Always clad in a full Blue Jays uniform, Donaldson is known for his infamous chant. While banging out a drum rhythm, he'll yell the words, 'Let's go'. Then, pointing to the nearest passerby with his drum stick, he'll wait until 'Blue Jays' is uttered back to complete the phrase.

Donaldson, 48, says the impact of the chant is what motivates him.

"It's a good gig," Donaldson said. "One thing that keeps bringing me back is when I see seniors who know what to say when I point to them. And when I see little kids knowing what to do. That's what really grabs me."

A married father of three, Donaldson is also a music teacher at an East York elementary school. He teaches during the week, but on the weekends he never fails to share his drumbeat with the crowds.

Born and raised in Chicago, Donaldson used to drum outside the stadiums of the city's major sports teams. After doing that for a while, he was asked to join R&B and soul singer Otis Clay's band.

"I went on the road with the band for five years," recalls Donaldson. "Then we visited Toronto and the rest is history."

Donaldson met his wife while touring in Toronto and eventually migrated to the city to be with her. That's when he decided to start drumming in front of Toronto's newly built SkyDome.

Teaming with a saxophone player, Donaldson set up shop one day in 1989 and began jamming outside the stadium. That same day, an operations manager hired him on the spot.

"He saw what we were doing and said, 'Hey, can you do this every game?' And that was it," said Donaldson.

Since that fateful day, a lot has changed. The sax player got married and left. The Jays won two World Series. Oh, and Donaldson lost some hair.

"The other day they showed me on the [Rogers Centre screen]," he said. "Obviously back then I had a lot of hair. I had Jheri curls — the Juan Guzman look. So people yesterday were telling me 'Hey, where's all your hair gone?'"

Outdoor options being explored for next season

HOCKEY There could be as many as three NHL games played outside of traditional venues next season.

The league's competition committee discussed several different scenarios during a wide-ranging meeting on Thursday and left open the possibility for games to be played outdoors in Boston and Calgary, with another being held under the roof at Montreal's Olympic Stadium.

"We are looking at a couple potential additional special events beyond the NBC Winter Classic game," said NHLPA executive director Paul Kelly. "(It's something) that we all collectively think will be very good for the game. We think that they won't dilute the product that we've created."

There are a number of logistical issues still to be worked out.

The Habs are hoping to host their game in November or December to coincide with the end of their centennial celebrations while the Boston Bruins will play theirs at Fenway Park in the traditional Winter Classic spot on New Year's Day.

Even though there has been some discussion that a game at Calgary's McMahon Stadium might be played as a New Year's doubleheader, there's also the possibility it will be held at another time — perhaps to coincide with CBC's annual Hockey Day in Canada.

A decision is looming.

"It does have to be decided rather quickly because our schedule is being released in two weeks," said Colin Campbell, the NHL's director of hockey operations. "Gary (Bettman) and the people arranging this are just trying to put it all together."

The competition committee also discussed several other issues, but didn't vote on any specific rule changes.

One recommendation that didn't get through was the suggestion coming out of the GM Meetings in March that a misconduct penalty start being handed out to players who fight directly after a faceoff.

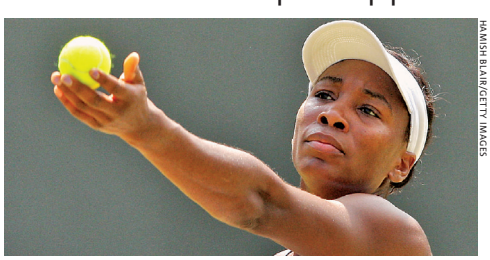
Venus rising at Wimbledon despite apparent knee trouble

TENNIS Even on one good leg, Venus Williams is tough to beat at Wimbledon.

The five-time champion wore a strap on her left knee Thursday, but still advanced to the third round by beating Kateryna Bondarenko of Ukraine 6-3, 6-2.

Tournament favourite Williams has been hampered by knee trouble in the past, but there was no indication of a problem this week until she walked onto sunny Court 1 bandaged from mid-calf to mid-thigh.



HAMISH BLAIR/GETTY IMAGES

Venus Williams serves during her 6-3, 6-2 win over Kateryna Bondarenko on Thursday at Wimbledon.

Williams let out a yelp when she appeared to pull up on a backhand in the third game, perhaps because of the knee. Otherwise she moved across the grass freely, charging forward to pounce on short balls. She won 17 points at the net to two for Bondarenko.

Williams was coy about the reason for the tape.

"Just for support," she said twice in response to questions.

Pressed about what was wrong with her knee, she said: "What happened was that I needed some support, and then I went and got the support, and then I wore it in the match."

Johnny's got a gun

Celeb outlaw Dillinger Depp's latest avatar

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News

Movie feature

Johnny Depp plays larger-than-life criminal John Dillinger in Michael Mann's Public Enemies.

Johnny Depp doesn't know what time it is. Though he technically calls an adorable village in France home and owns an island in the Caribbean, the mercurial actor spends so much time working that his internal clock is all out of whack.

"I've been on location for so long that I don't know what time zone I'm in. I could be in Puerto Rico at the moment," he says before adding with a thoughtful grin, "I still sort of am."

Depp has made a career out of embodying larger-than-life characters, making oddballs completely relatable. He has a surprisingly low number of turkeys on his packed resume from the last 25 years.

For every The Ninth Gate or Don Juan Demarco, there are plenty of films like Donnie Brasco, Fear and Loathing in Las Vegas and What's Eating Gilbert Grape — and that's even before getting into his work with Tim Burton.

Public Enemies hits theatres next week

"Most people when they hear Tim give me direction or we're talking about the character on the set, people are baffled, completely befuddled," Depp says of the director he's worked with on some of his most famous roles.

They're working again now, too, on Burton's take on Alice in Wonderland, in which Depp plays the Mad Hatter.

In his latest film, Public Enemies — out next week — Depp takes on the iconic role of celebrity outlaw John Dillinger, someone he found he could easily relate to.

"Dillinger was handed the ball and he just ran with it, which isn't any different than what happened to me a very long time ago," Depp explains. "You're handed the ball, and you go as far as you can go until somebody says, 'Alright, Kid, you're done. Get off the ride.'"

On the web

- For movie trailers, photos and screen times, or to buy tickets, visit metronews.ca/movies.

But that doesn't seem like it will happen any time soon for Depp, not with Alice coming down the pike, plus talk about a fourth Pirates of the Caribbean film. The success he's enjoyed has been immense — there is that private island, after all — but it has its draw backs.

For instance, he can't exactly go wherever he wants without getting noticed. But Depp accepts the necessity of it. "I suppose the alternative is the real drag, that if there's no attention then the job goes away," he says reflectively.

Still, there must be some things he'd like to do that he can't at his level of celebrity.

"I'd walk through Disneyland with my kids. I'd go on every ride," he admits.

"Daddy walks through Disneyland with them now, things get weird."

Sister's Keeper a crying shame

My Sister's Keeper

Director: Nick Cassavetes
Stars: Cameron Diaz, Abigail Breslin
Classification: PG
Rating: ⊕⊕

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News

Nick Cassavetes' latest film is a cold, unfeeling tear-jerking machine, unrelenting in its quest to make you reach for the tissues. It pushes every button it can think of to get the waterworks going, not because the emotion of the story demands it, but because watching a movie like this, you're just supposed to be crying.

The story is a tricky one, a complex tale of sacrifice and compromise in the face of terminal disease. After finding out their second child (newcomer Sofia Vassilieva) has a rare form of leukemia, a couple (Cameron Diaz and Jason Patric) make the controversial decision to have another child (Abigail Breslin), a "donor child," in an effort to keep the other alive.

And it works, but requires the youngest to endure multiple operations, bone marrow extracts and hospital stays. At age 11, after being asked for a kidney, she says enough is enough and hires a lawyer (Alec Baldwin) to sue for medical emancipation.

The real tragedy is that's some meaty subject matter that could make for very compelling, multilayered storytelling exploring the complexities of the situation. But that's not what we get. Instead, we get a relentless tear-jerking machine.

The focus here is on the family, naturally, but it's too splayed. Every character — including Baldwin — gets a chance to narrate, just so the audience doesn't miss a single nuance that a better movie would have managed to communicate without resorting to six or seven narrators.

The whole mess is framed by Vassilieva going through a book of collages she's made of her life — which would've been a neat framing device, except the movie proceeds to flit around through time with no way of telling the audience they've just jumped, say, two years back. By the time you figure out where a scene fits in the chronology, the next one has already started.

It's tough to fault Diaz, Baldwin, Patric or any of the young actors involved. They all try valiantly to make the best of it, but the material is working against them. What could have been poignant and complex comes off shrill, saccharine and cynical.

Cheri's tone inconsistent

Cheri

STEVE GOW
for Metro Canada

Michelle Pfeiffer and Rupert Friend play lovers in Cheri.

REVIEW At 51, Michelle Pfeiffer is still a stunning beauty and so, it would seem natural that she star as an ageing-but-alluring temptress in her latest film, Cheri.

In this adaptation of Colette's classic 1920 novel, the actress shines not just physically but also by showing us that — as Lea, a retired early-20th century Parisian courtesan — she can still convincingly seduce the wealthy son of a rival.

Nicknamed Cheri (Rupert Friend), the young bachelor and his elder lover endure for six years until his mother arranges a separate marriage to a more eligible suitor. As such, the passionate couple discovers that the informal nature of their relationship may be more profound than they originally conceived.

Directed by Stephen Frears (The Queen) from a script by Christopher Hampton, Cheri definitely has the promise of success. But whereas this filmmaking-duo captured scandalous thrills when they paired for 1988's Dangerous Liaisons, Cheri only briefly alludes to such seedy apprehension.

Instead, the drama's tone is too inconsistent; especially when a jarring narration pops up and suddenly lends the film a Little Britain-esque comedic feel.

Allen as sharp as ever

Whatever Works

Director: Woody Allen
Stars: Larry David, Evan Rachel Wood
Classification: PG-13
Rating: ⊕⊕⊕⊕

ANNE BRODIE

Woody Allen has finally rediscovered his mojo and pulled off one of his best films in years. He's back in New York after a couple of soggy Euro trash outings, as robust and inventive as he's ever been.

And Larry David, as the central character and a newer model of the master, is perfection; Allen appears to hand him his mantle. Not only does David seamlessly sub for Allen but he's hysterical in his own right. They're Hollywood's hottest new couple, and as sharp as it gets these days.

David is Boris Yellnikoff, a younger, sexier malcontent, a scathingly hilarious but unforgiving moaner, who "sees everything" and so is able to break the cinematic fourth wall to address the audience directly. He immediately shares his primary belief — that life is "whatever works."

His café friends wonder who he's talking to as he delivers his big monologue, because they don't see "us." Don't worry, Boris tells them. "They're here to see me." And he's right, David's the draw. He's the real deal, delivering Allen's dense script with zing.

Boris is a bitter string theorist, who was once nearly nominated for the Nobel Prize. He apparently married to "quell the panic" but that too flopped. When he failed at suicide, he "moved downtown and gave up." He's a study in contrasts, the life of the party and a self-righteous hater of people ("inchworms and cretins"). He craves isolation but he doesn't find it.

A Southern teenager named Melodie St. Ann Celestine (Wood) shows up on Boris' doorstep looking for food. He lets her in, against everything he stands for, but starts to feel twinges of life rising. He's a 'genius' and she's 'stupid', but they develop a bond.

Boris is really old and Melodie is really young. We may not be gung-ho for their relationship which recalls the Allen and Soon Yi Previn saga, but we're shown how organically they mesh. I'm not saying it's Allen's apologia and I'm not saying it's forever, but he lays it out.

Allen has renewed his cachet in this, his 42nd film. He's back with New York, his longest-lasting, truest love. The city may be filled with inchworms and cretins and the occasional genius but they are inchworms and cretins and geniuses Allen understands.

Too alienating an Experience

The Girlfriend Experience

Director: Steven Soderbergh
Stars: Sasha Grey, Glenn Kenny
Classification: STC
Rating: ⊕⊕⊕

ADAM NAYMAN
for Metro Candada

REVIEW Having fuelled 401(k) fantasies with the Ocean's series, Steven Soderbergh probes the newfound vulnerability of the high-roller set with The Girlfriend Experience, an elliptical drama set against the backdrop of the current economic crisis.

Chelsea (preternatural old porn icon Sasha Grey) works as an escort for Manhattan's power elite; in between hotel-room rendezvouses with men increasingly focused on the erosion of their assets, she works diligently to distinguish herself as a trusted sex-trade brand name.

Chelsea is a post-modern creature — the call girl as self-starting entrepreneur. She's never less than immaculately coiffed, but there's surely nothing glamorous about watching her haggle over rates with her web designer, nor in her meeting with a grotty "erotic connoisseur" (film critic Glenn Kenny) who promises to promote her services in exchange for a free sample.

This latter episode might be interpreted as Soderbergh commenting on his own commodity status as an art-house hero, a reputation that will only be ratified by The Girlfriend Experience's beautifully framed interiors and expertly fragmented puzzle-box structure.

Soderbergh's technique is so refined, in fact, that this film about states of alienation becomes more than a little bit alienating itself.

Chelsea's near-total opacity is likely the point of this 21st century gloss on early Godard, but by the film's end, it's debatable whether we even know Two or Three Things about Her.

Sasha Grey stars in The Girlfriend Experience.

The Soderbergh experience

InFocus

Richard Crouse
metronews.ca/infocus

You'd be hard pressed to find a movie fan that hasn't seen the Steven Soderbergh films Traffic, Erin Brockovich and at least one of the Ocean's movies.

A little more eclectic, but still popular are The Limey and Out of Sight, two of the director's box office near-misses. Mainstream films like those, though, comprise only a fraction of the director's resume.

Since his breakout film Sex, Lies and Videotape in 1989, Soderbergh has directed 19 films (including The Girlfriend Experience, in theatres now), but only a handful — usually the ones starring George Clooney or Julia Roberts— could be called blockbusters. Many others have, however, languished.

Here's a couple of the director's deserving films that didn't set the box office ablaze.

Soderbergh said that "all attempts at synopsizing (Schizopolis) have ended in failure and hospitalization."

With health card in hand, here goes: Schizopolis is a surrealistic look at two people who can't communicate. As the level of emotional detachment increases so does the weird stuff.

There's an exterminator (David Jansen) who only speaks in non sequiturs and near the end Soderbergh's character (he's a triple threat here as actor, writer and director) only speaks in overdubbed Italian, Japanese and French.

Even the director acknowledges that this is an eccentric film, noting that the only people who ever ask him about it are "the ones with the crazy look in their eyes when I go to festivals."

Critically acclaimed director Steven Soderbergh says all his films "feel commercial" when he's making them. His latest, The Girlfriend Experience, is now in limited release.

1993's King of the Hill is more accessible but still made less than $1.5 million at the box office. Based on a 1972 memoir by A.E. Hotchner, it's the story of a 12-year-old boy surviving and thriving on his own during the Great Depression.

One IMDB contributor called this "the best American film of the nineties," while another wrote "Spielberg, eat your heart out, this is a real feel good movie."

Rent it for its unsentimental storytelling and great performances, particularly from Adrien Brody who plays the main character's surrogate big brother.

Other interesting Soderbergh movies still waiting to grab an audience are the Spalding Gray monologue film Gray's Anatomy and the suspense story Kafka, but no matter how odd or how low budget these films are, don't get the idea Soderbergh doubts their commercial appeal.

"When I'm making them," he says, "they all feel commercial to me. It's no joke. If I'm making a movie for a million bucks, I feel like this thing could blow up. It's happened before."

"All attempts at synopsizing (Schizopolis) have ended in failure and hospitalization."
Steven Soderbergh

Paul Gross plays a gunslinger who stumbles into a Canadian hamlet in Gunless.

Gunless in north

Paul Gross brings western to Canada

STEVE GOW
for Metro Canada

By portraying everything from a Mountie in TV's Due South, to a Canadian war hero in his epic drama Passchendaele, Paul Gross has become a national treasure. However, in his latest project, the actor is putting his reputation on the line by playing the part of an American.

"It was the only way I could be a gunslinger," says Gross recently on the movie set of Gunless — which just finished filming in British Columbia this week. "There were no Canadian gunslingers (called) The Saskatoon Kid. I don't think we had them."

As a result, Gross had to settle as The Montana Kid in director Bill Phillips' (Foolproof) latest comedy. A fictional tale about an American outlaw that stumbles into a sleepy Canadian hamlet, Kid struggles with an impending gunfight in a town that doesn't even supply bullets.

Gunless is scheduled for release in spring 2010

"I've always loved westerns. I've always loved the idea of taking what is very much an American genre and pushing it north of the 49th parallel," says Phillips. "Given our sense of irony and sometimes our sense of envy of America, we can poke fun of ourselves."

As such, Phillips took his production to arid Osoyoos, B.C., where his crew not only constructed an impressive small-town in the middle of a remote hillside, but they began filming under extremely hot and dusty conditions.

"We made a very pointed decision to come to Osoyoos," adds Phillips. "That was a bit of a daring move because it's a Canadian film with a Canadian budget and it takes a lot to pull this off. But we decided to put our eggs in this basket and we're glad we did because anywhere we point the camera, it looks great."

Sonata intelligent family drama

Tokyo Sonata
Director: Kiyoshi Kurosawa
Stars: Teruyuki Kagawa, Kyoko Koizumi, Yu Koyanagi
Classification: STC
Rating:

PHIL BROWN
for Metro Canada

A scene from Tokyo Sonata.

REVIEW Tokyo Sonata is the latest film by Kiyoshi Kurosawa, a director known primarily for his atmospheric horror films like Pulse. In those movies, Kurosawa showcased a mastery of film form that set him apart from his genre peers.

It was always assumed that Kurosawa had more skill and intelligence than his horror contemporaries and that theory is confirmed by Tokyo Sonata. It is a devastating drama set in contemporary Japan that proves Kurosawa is capable of creating a great film without relying on the suspense and scares that have defined his career.

The opening moments of the film feel like a traditional Japanese family drama. We meet a family who survive purely on routine. They are neither happy nor distraught, but mindlessly trudge along with their empty lives. Everything is disrupted when the father is fired.

He is too ashamed to tell anyone, but the unfortunate event seems to cause family implosion anyways. One son joins the American army, the other son ditches school to learn piano against his parents' wishes, and the mother … well, it would be unfair to spoil what happens to her.

The first act sets up a family drama that you'll think you've seen before, but Kurosawa is merely toying with audience expectations and takes his characters down a road filled with comedy, tragedy, and a slight hint of the macabre.

It would have been easy to conclude this story with some sort of unrealistic family reconciliation or tragic death. Instead Kurosawa goes against the grain and creates a film that contains intelligent commentary about contemporary Japanese families and the current global economic crisis without ever pandering to the audience or relying on clichés.

Gooby limp kids' movie

Gooby
Director: Wilson Coneybeare
Stars: Robbie Coltrane, Matthew Knight
Classification: STC
Rating:

PHIL BROWN
for Metro Canada

Scottish actor Robbie Coltrane voices the titular stuffed bear in Gooby.

Sometimes you've got to feel sorry for kids who watch movies. While there are plenty of strong family films out there, for the most part movies made specifically for children are irritatingly condescending.

It can feel as if the filmmakers knew they were making an awful film, but at a certain point they just shrugged and said, "Screw it, it's for kids. They'll never notice." Case in point is Gooby, a Canadian family film that desperately wants to be E.T., but doesn't even match the low standards of Drop Dead Fred.

Gooby follows the "child who creates an imaginary friend to deal with loneliness and trauma" plotline that has been used in countless family films. In this case, the imaginary friend is a gigantic stuffed bear. The good news is that Gooby is embodied in a costume rather than in cheesy CGI.

Unfortunately, the special effects budget was so low that the bear's facial expressions are limited to "mouth open" and "mouth closed." The filmmakers probably could have pulled it off through creative editing if the character didn't talk much, but sadly he has dialogue in every scene.

The one aspect of the Gooby character that works is a wonderful voice performance by burly Scottish actor Robbie Coltrane. Coltrane's big, but gentle voice is perfect for this type of character, it's just a shame that he ended up whoring his talents out to such an embarrassing project.

Eugene Levy also pops up in a supporting role and it's always sad to see such an incredible comic talent reduced to appearing in movies like Gooby between direct-to-DVD American Pie sequels.

Writer/Director Wilson Coneybeare has a background in children's television that shows in the decent production values he got on a budget and the unfortunate TV quality writing and effects.

Young children might enjoy Gooby's lighthearted tone and bathroom humor, but forcing them to sit through such a limp movie simply because they don't know any better feels like a light form of child abuse.

"It's nice to do a homegrown movie ... that feels Canadian, but in the good way." Ryan Belleville Calgary comic Ryan Belleville has cleaned up his act. From stand-up bits about punching cats and porn moustaches to a raunchy role in teen flick Going the Distance (2004), the comedian's material is not always kid-friendly.

Surprisingly Finn on the Fly — opening next week — is his second children's movie role. The first was Disney's made-for-TV film Stuck in the Suburbs.

"It's funny 'cause, I am not a vulgar performer, but I am not a family performer either — I have done some very adult stuff. I would not recommend children see my standup," says Belleville, 29, who grew up in Calgary but now lives in Los Angeles. "It's nice to do a homegrown movie that's shot in Regina that feels Canadian, but in the good way," he says of Finn, in which he plays a frisbee-loving canine morphed into a human thanks to a botched science experiment by a neighbour (Ana Gasteyer).

The former Loose Moose Theatre regular prepared by studying Littlest Hobo reruns and his dogs. "They can sit and stare for hours, and then something happens and they are instantly alert. It's hilarious to watch."

Sons of playwright/actor Terry Belleville and actress Donna Belleville, Ryan and his brother Jason (writer-producer for Little Mosque on the Prairie) come by their crafts honestly, and are collaborating on a TV show set to film this summer. Ryan's credits include a Phil Hartman comedy award, appearances on his own half-hour CTV comedy show, Sean Cullen, the Late, Late Show, Halifax Comedy Fest and Just for Laughs, Life on a Stick and a Dentyne gum ad in which his frozen head detaches.

17 Again

REVIEW In his first major starring role outside the High School Musical franchise, Zac Efron is looking to prove that he's more than just a pretty face, that he can carry a movie. And he very well might be able to, if the movie in question didn't spend so much time trying to make that point. There's a certain "Hey look, he's doing it!" aspect to 17 Again that can get in the way of the movie itself. 17 Again follows Mike O'Donnell (played as an adult by Matthew Perry), who, through a bit of hocus pocus, is transformed back to his 17-year-old self (Efron), only it's still present day, so suddenly he's going to high school with his kids.

Angels & Demons

REVIEW Harvard Professor Robert Langdon (Tom Hanks) is back in action. Three years after he uncovered the complicated personal life of Jesus Christ in Da Vinci Code he's once again using his knowledge of symbology to unravel the mystery of a secret brotherhood called the Illuminati and prevent a terrorist act against the Vatican. What's more, he'll do it all in just one night. Sounds thrilling, yes? Unfortunately it isn't.

Crank: High Voltage

REVIEW Crank: High Voltage is disgusting, disposable, disorienting, inhuman and infantile … and those are its good points. Immediately picking up where the attention deficit friendly adventures of the first instalment left off, brutish British action hero Jason Statham returns as Chev Chellios, who, after surviving an impossible fall from a helicopter, has his heart removed by Triad organ thieves and replaced by a bionic one.

In order for Chev to beat the clock — again — and retrieve his resilient ticker, he has to keep his body constantly pulsing with electricity, a gimmicky plot device that unleashes scene after scene of finger-in-socket silliness.

Dance Flick

REVIEW You have to worry about a movie that begins with a thug in a dance-battle showing off by shoving his head up his own behind. Surprisingly in Dance Flick, that leading gag is actually deceptive. The latest offering in the oversaturated market of spoof-comedies (a la Epic Movie, Date Movie, etc.), Dance Flick definitely has plenty of crass material about obesity and flatulence but it also rises to the monumental challenge of trying to scrape something original out of a horribly-flogged dead horse.

Ghosts of Girlfriends Past

REVIEW Matthew McConaughey stars as Matthew McConaughey, though we're told he's playing Connor Mead, a celebrity photographer and serial womanizer who was born and raised in Massachusetts, despite his perma-tan and Texas accent. He ventures home for the wedding of his brother, played by Breckin Meyer and proceeds to bah-humbug the whole celebration in a not-terribly-convincing down-with-love drunken tirade. Of course, there to challenge his status quo is the one who got away, played begrudgingly by Jennifer Garner.

Monsters vs. Aliens

REVIEW There's something refreshing about a movie with a title that tells you everything you need to know about it. Part Plan 9 from Outer Space, part The Dirty Dozen, Monsters vs. Aliens is all about good, old-fashioned escapism. Just don't pay too close attention to the plot holes and lazy exposition. The movie has an all-star cast, the kind only possible in an animated movie, led by Reese Witherspoon as Susan, a bride-to-be who grows to five stories tall after being walloped by a radioactive meteor on her wedding day.

Night at the Museum 2: Battle of the Smithsonian

REVIEW In 2006's Night at the Museum, technology allowed Ben Stiller to realistically wrestle all sorts of taxidermy in New York's Museum of Natural History. Now in Battle of the Smithsonian, Stiller goes to Washington D.C. and pretty much does the same thing. Well, almost. He may have gone from security guard to shilling dodgy products (like the unloseable key ring) on TV, but Larry Daley (Stiller) is still drawn back to the museum only to discover his nocturnal pals being carted off to the Smithsonian for storage.

Obsessed

REVIEW For a movie that's being marketed as "this year's sexiest thriller," Obsessed certainly lacks some key components. Like sex and thrills for starters. In fact, motivated characters, a sharper script and a consistent tone wouldn't have hurt the value of this so-called thriller either. In the neutered Fatal Attraction-wannabe, Idris Elba (RocknRolla) plays Derek Charles, a successful executive who suddenly finds himself the mark of an attractive office temp named Lisa (Ali Larter).

The Soloist

REVIEW Between its infamous rescheduling out of Oscar season last year and star Robert Downey Jr.'s hilarious diatribe in Tropic Thunder about the perils of playing mentally ill on film, it's hard to watch The Soloist without that little golden guy tapping on your shoulder. Sure, Jamie Foxx makes a good schizophrenic homeless Juilliard dropout, but an Oscar-worthy one? Downey quietly steals the movie out from under his co-star. His Steve Lopez is a fantastic mix of world-weary cynicism and innate curiosity.

Star Trek

REVIEW In what could easily have been Star Trek: The College Years, the film brings together the crew of the USS Enterprise for their maiden voyage to do battle with a black hole-building Romulan with a chip on his shoulder (Eric Bana, with Mike Tyson-like face tattoos). In the midst of the crisis, the filmmakers reinvigorate well-worn heroes Kirk (Chris Pine) and Spock (Zachary Quinto) by sprinkling on liberal amounts of daddy issues — the same that make up much of the personal drama on director J.J. Abrams and producer Damon Lindelof's Lost.

Ned Ehrbar/Metro Canada

Terminator Salvation

REVIEW In this unwanted and perfunctory prequel/sequel slog, the robot apocalypse's chief adversary, resistance leader John Connor (Christian Bale) is trying to find his would be teenage father Kyle Reese (Anton Yelchin) before the evil cybernetic empire called Skynet erases him, thus eliminating Connor's existence. Confused? Not as confused as supposedly executed death row prisoner Marcus Wright (Sam Worthington, who's very good in an underwritten role) who literally wakes up after a nuclear blast and spends much of the movie's running time stumbling about the desert evading android annihilation.

ROGERS HI-SPEED INTERNET JUST GOT FASTER.

Rogers Hi-Speed Internet is the fastest. And now, the fastest is even faster. In fact, our popular Lite level has tripled its speeds, while the Express level has increased by over 40%. And, at no additional charge to our customers.

Call 1 888 ROGERS1 to see why more people are switching to Rogers Hi-Speed Internet every day.

ROGERS HI-SPEED INTERNET.
THE FASTEST AND MOST RELIABLE. PERIOD.*

ROGERS™

*Fastest and most reliable speed claim supported by independent third-party research conducted by comScore Inc., comparing average download speed to the equivalent speeds of the incumbent DSL provider. Testing completed in the Rogers Ontario footprint from October 1, 2008 to January 31, 2009.

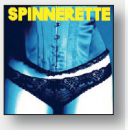
Music

Metro recommends

• Spinnerette, Spinnerette:
Punk diva Brody Dalle's new band blends Pink-like pop with ferocious guitars and fuzzy-bass beats.



• The Ecstatic, Mos Def:
Mos' poetic flow weaves through smooth beats from Madlib and J Dilla and a mix of globe-spanning samples.

• Street Sweeper Social Club, Street Sweeper Social Club:
Tom Morello's Rage-guitar riffs collide with Boots Riley's rhymes for a funk-metal/hip-hop hybrid.

Alexisonfire still chirping

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI
for Metro Canada

"With the wives, out go the groupies," says Alexisonfire's lead screamer George Pettit, just days before the band released its fourth album Young Cardinals/Old Crows.

While the Hamilton-based vocalist sounds like he might be reassuring his wife that he'll be a good boy on the road, he's also expressing just how much the band has grown up in the eight years since it stormed MuchMusic's airwaves.

When the group first began touring in 2002 the band members were known as much for their hard partying ways as they were for their aggressive, hardcore-meets-emo sound. But now, close to a decade later, the band is older and wiser.

"We were kids when we wrote that first record," says Pettit. "Over time everything changes. We have this wealth of travel behind us, we've spent years on the road living in a van, we have wives, houses and more adult responsibilities."

Young Cardinals/Old Crows, the new album from Alexisonfire, was released this week.

All that translates into less debauchery on the road, and that's fine with Pettit. "Those things are fun in their own right, but if you're into music strictly to screw groupies and get drunk, that's a very superficial reason to be involved.

"What keeps us here is not the wild lifestyle," he adds. "It's more about the spiritual journey that is loving music and trying to have that never-ending thirst for new records."

Moving from fast living rockers to property tax paying husbands, can turn a once exciting act into a safer, watered down version of itself (see Gavin Rossdale, David Usher), but if anything, the opposite has happened with Alexisonfire.

The band's music is somewhat tamer than it used to be — Pettit's throaty yells have given way to almost scratchy singing — but the music is more complex, and Dallas' smooth vocals are cleaner and catchier than ever before. It's easily the group's best album yet, and while some might miss the frantic, youthful energy, the more focused, thoughtful Alexis has created something that, finally, transcends the screamo tag.

"Screaming paints yourself into a corner," says Pettit. "I'd been trying new stuff in the jam space and when it came time to recording demos I just tried to see how many songs I could do with this type of vocals. It felt really good."

To get to where they wanted to be musically, the band had to make changes to more than just its sound. In the past members would rush through recording sessions, but this time they spent eight months writing. Pettit says the longer timeframe meant less mistakes and stronger songs.

"When I look back on our older records, if we thought about those songs for longer they would have turned out very differently," he explains. "With this, there's not a lot that really irks me. Or, maybe in a couple months from now I'll hear something and say maybe I shouldn't have done that. But right now this is great."

Holly Williams learns to keep her cool

Holly Williams had one of those days recently. Her iPhone fell in the toilet, her air conditioner broke and her thermostat soared.

But Williams kept her cool.

"Three years ago that would have been a big issue," said the 28-year-old singer-songwriter, whose new CD, Here With Me, was released this month. "It was 85 at my house and I'm going, 'You know what, I still have my health.'"

Williams' perspective changed after she and her older sister, Hilary, were nearly killed in a car crash near Memphis in 2006. Headed to their grandfather's funeral in Mississippi, her sister was driving, and just before the wreck she told Holly to put on her seat belt. Holly says it saved her life.

The wreck crushed Holly's right arm (she couldn't play guitar for five months) and forced Hilary to learn to walk again.

"It made me appreciate the simple things, like taking a shower," she said of her recovery. "Professionally, my work ethic changed. My songwriting became more serious."

Here With Me is the sophomore effort for Williams, the daughter of Hank Williams Jr. and the granddaughter of Hank Williams Sr.

"My dad was so famous that it overshadowed Hank Sr.'s legacy," said Williams. "I knew he was a singer and I knew he wrote a couple of songs."

It wasn't until she discovered singer-songwriters like Joni Mitchell, Neil Young and Bob Dylan that she realized the full extent of his influence.

"Even Stevie Wonder," she recalled. "I met him and he mentioned Hank Sr. So I was really brought back to the Hank Williams stuff from the stuff I was listening to."

The debut of Spinnerette

Ex-Distiller Brody Dalle returns with adventurous new group

KEITH CARMAN
for Metro Canada

"I'm not interested in placating anyone anymore. I'm just not going to do it," grunts Spinnerette vocalist/guitarist Brody Dalle, discussing her latest endeavour's eponymous debut.

Best known for her work with punk rockers The Distillers in the earlier part of this decade, Dalle returns from a two-year hiatus with what is easily her most adventurous, ambitious effort to date. Spinnerette features infectious melodies intertwined with subtle harmonies slashing across a bold mixture of subdued punk heart and straight-up pop/rock. The 13-track affair is nothing less than stunning both musically and in terms of approach; a more palatable evolution beyond The Distillers' revered 2003 effort Coral Fang.

"I've moved on but other people haven't," she continues. "I have a very different life. I'm going out on a limb. I find when I don't censor myself, more original music comes out. When you give a f-- about what other people think, it stifles you."

And to what does Dalle accredit this vast departure from her guttural roots into a more assertive personal pleasure? The same thing that eventually changes most lives: parenthood.

"I gave birth to a child. I don't care about anyone else anymore," she shrugs nonchalantly. "For nine months I didn't feel like playing music. I couldn't identify with it; wanted nothing to do with it. I picked curtains instead of writing songs. When my daughter was born, it was the most incredible thing but it was all-consuming. I couldn't recognize myself when I looked in the mirror so I started writing music again. I'm a different person now, so (creating the album) was an accident that turned into a project that turned into a band."

Singer and guitarist Brody Dalle — best known for fronting punk band The Distillers — has returned with a new outfit called Spinnerette. The group's self-titled debut was released last week.

While it may seem like an eventuality to us average Joes, for others, becoming a parent has a greater impact when affecting an already-extraordinary life such as Dalle's. The Melbourne, Australia native has released three album on powerful record labels, toured the world, married not one but two rock stars (Rancid's Tim Armstrong and Queens Of The Stone Age's Josh Homme, her current conjugal cohort), staved off addictions of various degrees, seen her formative outfit The Distillers come, go and morph into current project Spinnerette.

"I've moved on but other people haven't ... I find when I don't censor myself, more original music comes out." Brody Dalle

Not bad for someone barely hitting her 30th birthday. Still, as Brody promotes Spinnerette's release through Canada's own Anthem Records, she admits to be most humbled by the power of maternology. Conceding that both maternity and music have reinvigorated her own inner-child, Dalle indirectly deems them her greatest muse.

"It changes everything irreversibly and it's a good thing, especially for me. I miss my family like crazy but this is my job. I don't know how to do anything else and if I didn't do it, I'd walk this earth like half a person."

Forget all the jokes: Jackson mattered

From saving the industry to smashing MTV's colour barrier, he broke all kinds of ground

The rumour tweets started hitting my phone just before 5 p.m. ET Thursday. Within an hour, the first reports of Michael Jackson's death started filtering through Twitter, Facebook, TMZ and Perez Hilton's site. They had the news long before CNN, CBS, the LA Times, NBC and MSNBC confirmed it. By then, so many people rushed to update Jackson's Wikipedia entry that the servers crashed.

Yesterday, June 25, 2009, will be remembered just as we remember April 8, 1994, for Kurt Cobain; December 8, 1980 for John Lennon; and August 16, 1977, for Elvis. Michael Jackson carried that kind of cultural clout.

Forget the lurid allegations, the buying of the Elephant Man's bones, the hyperbaric sleeping chambers, the plastic surgery and the dangling babies.

Here's how we should remember Michael Jackson:

First, people forget that the Thriller album essentially saved the recording industry when it was released in 1982. Suffering from the double whammy of the post-disco sales depression and a brutal recession, Thriller almost single-handedly resurrected the music industry.

Sure, it sold somewhere north of 50 million copies on its own, but its real value lay in the fact that this record got people into record stores again where they bought it — and one or two other albums.

This one album went a long way towards pulling the entire industry out of some desperate doldrums.

Thriller was also sprung upon the public at the same time as the compact disc. Because Quincy Jones' production was so tight and crisp, CD copies of Thriller were used as demo discs for CD players, speakers and amplifiers.

Who knows how many billions of dollars of gear was sold once people heard the opening drumbeat from Billie Jean coming off a CD?

Michael Jackson was also once a pretty shrewd businessman. In the '80s, he managed to outbid Paul McCartney for a large portion of the Beatles catalogue. The revenues generated by those holdings went a long way to support his lifestyle for the rest of this life.

And speaking of which, Jackson broke a major taboo when he licensed the Beatles' Revolution to Nike for a TV commercial. People forget what kind of outrage followed. Using a popular song to sell a product as crass as shoes? Today, though, you can't turn on a TV without hearing a major artist's music on a commercial.

Thriller, Jackson's 1982 album, almost single-handedly resurrected the music industry.

And finally — and most importantly — let's not forget that Michael Jackson broke the colour barrier on MTV.

Before Thriller, MTV was a channel that showed nothing but rock and pop videos featuring white faces. Initially, MTV refused to run the clip for Billie Jean.

It wasn't until Walter Yentnikoff, president of CBS, Michael's record company, threatened to pull every artist on their roster from the young channel — MTV had only been on the air since August 1, 1981, with just 250 clips in its library — that they relented.

Had it not been for the power of Michael Jackson and Thriller, would have MTV become the same cultural monster? And where would have people gone to learn about then-new artists such as Prince?

And speaking of videos, think about how Jackson furthered that art form; John Landis directed the 14 minute Thriller video; the morphing technology first seen in the clip for Black or White; the reported $8 million US spent on the five minute video for Scream with his sister Janet.

Let's therefore not focus on the tabloid stuff. The man did enough that we should remember for the great groundbreaking talent he was.

Musical connections

Elvis Costello gets artists to open up on talk TV show Spectacle

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI
for Metro Canada

Elvis Costello wants you to know one thing — he's not a journalist.

That's obvious of course, he's a legendary British musician who's been creating brilliant rock music since 1977, but now that he hosts Spectacle, a talk TV show on CTV, some might mistake him as a newsman instead of a musician.

"Music journalists make assumptions about performers and their motivation because they stand outside of things," he says on the phone from New York. "These days in particular there's a problem of opinionating because everyone can publish now. I'm not interested in doing that."

Costello is more focused on how his guests make music and the challenges they've overcome. He asked Rufus Wainwright about being pegged as a gay musician and got Tony Bennett to reveal that he passed up the chance to record the Louis Armstrong hit What a Wonderful World.

He also jams with his guests, playing alongside the Police and Spectacle's co-producer Elton John. It's likely he'll perform with Smokey Robinson on the last episode of the season, which airs tonight.

Spectacle's last episode, featuring Smokey Robinson, airs Friday night.

The renowned guitarist, and husband to Canadian jazz musician Diana Krall, says it would be strange if he didn't sing on the show. "If I set myself up as a chat show host, or the new king of late night, that would be different," he explains. "I'd be taking up a new career, but I'm not. I'm speaking as a musician to another musician."

Being an artist is, says Costello, a major asset for the job. He explains that he can connect with his guests on a level that other non-musician interviews can't because he knows the job from "the inside."

"I don't play piano like Herbie Hancock, but I do understand the inside of it," he says. "So the willingness to open up is probably based on that. And I'm not trying fit their answer into a preconceived thesis about them."

This season Costello's guests have mostly been music stalwarts such as Lou Reed, Kris Kristofferson and James Taylor, but he has had on younger acts, including Jenny Lewis, Wainwright and duo She & Him. While that's a pretty diverse list of performers, he does wish he could interview more newbies.

"Do I wish we could have more young artists? Yes, I wish we could," he says. "With them we base it more around musical performance because there's less to reflect on and those artists were less comfortable talking about their motivations."

While Costello says he "has a high regard" for all his guests, there was one interviewee this season that really stands out: Bill Clinton. "For him to take an hour out of his wife's busy presidential campaign to talk about music was fantastic," he says. "It was a genial interview, it was relaxed. I didn't feel I missed an opportunity to grill him, because that's like getting into the ring with Muhammad Ali."

Sealed divorce records for Gosselins

PEOPLE Jon and Kate Gosselin don't live in Montgomery County, Pa. So why are the stars of Jon & Kate Plus 8 getting divorced there?

One likely answer: to take advantage of an unusual local rule that keeps prying eyes away from divorce records. In Montgomery County, a wealthy enclave outside Philadelphia, divorce filings are automatically placed under seal — barring access to the media and the public and allowing fractious couples like the Gosselins to dissolve their broken marriages in private.

The rule was written decades ago, before no-fault divorce became an option and at a time when divorce petitions tended to be more explosive and salacious than they are today, said Richard Hodgson, the county's president judge.

Metro's 7th Heaven: Metro taps what's hot right now

1 will.i.am

MUSICIAN It's shaping up to be a great summer for the artist. First, he scored a massive hit with the new Black Eyed Peas album The E.N.D. Then, he bagged an even bigger smash with his latest war-of-words with Perez Hilton. God knows if will.i.am's manager actually assaulted the celeb blogger but we all know who everyone's rooting for.

2 Guns Don't Kill People ... Lazers do: Major Lazer

ALBUM If you are a thinking-Jamaica-going-downtown kind of person, this might just turn out to be the soundtrack of your summer. Indie mixmasters Diplo and Switch take the sun-friendly genres of dub and dancehall and mash it up with urban sounds to create a wildly raucous album that can get any porch party swinging.

3 David Lynch

ARTIST The king of cinematic curveballs turns to music — not one album, but two. First came Dark Night of the Soul, a collaboration with cult musicians Danger Mouse and Sparklehorse. Now there's word that he is a lyricist and producer for the upcoming Fox Bat Strategy, a tribute album for a musician who worked on Lynch's groundbreaking TV series Twin Peaks.

4 Intro to The Beatles Rock Band

5 Transformers: Revenge of the Fallen

FILM OK, the reviews are uniformly bad. And the accusations of racial stereotyping in robot banter are not helping either. But, look at the upside: Plenty of Michael Bay-approved CGI, more of your favourite bots, a hotter-than-ever Megan Fox and a cuter-than-ever Shia Lebouf. It's your call.

An icon's troubled life

Michael Jackson's rise and fall amid criminal allegations and rumours

The sudden death of Michael Jackson, an American cultural icon for almost 40 years, sent immediate shockwaves through a country that watched him evolve from a breathtakingly talented little boy in his youth to a bizarre eccentric in adulthood.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NICK UT/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TJ Thomas and Marie Bouchard remember Michael Jackson at Jackson's star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame on Thursday in Los Angeles.

"I'm 42 and he was my idol when I was a child," Vincent Curry, a New York advertising account co-ordinator, said Thursday shortly after hearing the news.

"He was everything. I saw the Jackson Five perform live in Birmingham, Alabama, when I was kid ... he meant the world to me then."

But Curry says his adoration of the pop star ended with allegations of pedophilia.

"Just this month he was trying to line up children to perform with him. He didn't have a problem he sought to overcome. He had a sickness and wanted no cure."

Jackson, 50, known around the world as the King of Pop, died Thursday after what some reports have said was cardiac arrest.

His demise comes after years of relative obscurity compared to the heights of fame he reached as a sweet-faced boy and young adult who possessed awe-inspiring singing, songwriting and dancing skills.

Shortly after his Thriller album became the best-selling pop album of all time, Jackson began a slow descent into eccentricity — and allegations of pedophilia — that haunted him until his death.

He altered his looks dramatically with plastic surgery and bought a massive property he christened Neverland Ranch, a child's paradise. There were suggestions he whitened his skin, although Jackson insisted his sudden paleness was the result of a medical condition.

By the end of his life, he was physically unrecognizable from the boy who wowed the world when he and his brothers burst onto the pop music scene in the early 1970s as The Jackson Five.

He was most recently in the news for a troubled attempt at a comeback. Fifty sold-out concerts in London were slated to begin on July 13, aimed at rescuing Jackson from the massive debt he'd accumulated during a lengthy hiatus from recording and performing.

But he was rumoured to have skipped out routinely on rehearsals in L.A., and his perfectionism had already forced the cancellation of the run's opening four dates.

"He's doing it mostly for his fans," Jackson's former spokesman, Dr. Tohme Tohme, recently told Rolling Stone magazine. "And he's doing it for his children and the children of the world."

Fans mourn MJ

- Hundreds of people converged on the UCLA Medical Center in Los Angeles as word spreads across radio, television and the Internet that Michael Jackson died.

The crowd, growing minute by minute, gathered in front of one of the entrances to the hospital where Jackson was rushed after collapsing at his home.

Some people in the group cried, waiting for an official announcement from the hospital as news helicopters whirled overhead and news vans clogged streets leading to the hospital.

Some people called friends by cellphone to pump them for any information they may have heard about Jackson.

An angel in life dies, 62

Farrah Fawcett succumbs after long battle with cancer

Farrah Fawcett, the Charlie's Angels star whose feathered blond hair and dazzling smile made her one of the biggest sex symbols of the 1970s, died Thursday after battling cancer. She was 62.

The pop icon, who in the 1980s set aside the fantasy girl image to tackle serious roles, died shortly before 9:30 a.m. in a Santa Monica hospital, spokesman Paul Bloch said.

Ryan O'Neal, the longtime companion who had reunited with Fawcett as she fought anal cancer, was at her side, along with close friend Alana Stewart, Bloch said.

"After a long and brave battle with cancer, our beloved Farrah has passed away," O'Neal said. "Although this is an extremely difficult time for her family and friends, we take comfort in the beautiful times that we shared with Farrah over the years and the knowledge that her life brought joy to so many people around the world."

Other Charlie's Angels stars paid tribute to her.

"Farrah had courage, she had strength, and she had faith. And now she has peace as she rests with the real angels," Jaclyn Smith said.

Said Cheryl Ladd: "She was incredibly brave and God will be welcoming her with open arms."

Fawcett burst on the scene in 1976 as one-third of the crime-fighting trio in TV's Charlie's Angels. A poster of her in a clingy swimsuit sold in the millions.

Her full, layered hairstyle became all the rage, with girls and women across America adopting the look.

She left the show after one season but had a flop on the big screen with Somebody Killed Her Husband. She turned to more serious roles in the 1980s and 1990s, winning praise playing an abused wife in The Burning Bed.

GETTY IMAGES

Farrah Fawcett burst on the scene in 1976 with Charlie's Angels.

She had been diagnosed with cancer in 2006. As she underwent treatment, she enlisted the help of O'Neal, who was the father of her now 24-year-old son, Redmond.

This month, O'Neal said he asked Fawcett to marry him and she agreed. "They would wed as soon as she can say yes," he said.

Her struggle with painful treatments and dispiriting setbacks was recorded in the television documentary Farrah's Story. Fawcett sought cures in Germany as well as the United States, battling the disease with iron determination even as her body weakened.

"Her big message to people is don't give up, no matter what they say to you, keep fighting," her friend Stewart said. NBC estimated the May 15, 2009, broadcast drew nearly nine million viewers.

In the documentary, Fawcett was seen shaving off most of her trademark locks before chemotherapy could claim them. Toward the end, she's seen huddled in bed, barely responding to a visit from her son.

Beefs common in R&B

MALCOLM VENABLE
Metro World News

On Keri Hilson's song Turnin' Me On, she suggests she's been ghost-writing for another artist, and tells an unnamed foe to move "to the left." When the song came out a few months ago, a giddy blogosphere responded with a collective "aw snap!" as she showed her claws; Hilson, it seemed, had released a diss record.

Even though it set off only a minor furor and a yawn (mostly because she seemed to be referencing Ciara and/or Beyoncé but, when pressed, said she wasn't) Hilson had the dubious distinction of becoming the latest singer to engage in the uncharted sport of R&B beef.

Of course, we all know hip-hop beefs. Yet as hip-hop has moved into the realm of pop/dance music, its ethos that you must always stomp out your enemies in song seems to have trickled down to a crop of young (and apparently gangsta) singers.

The list of R&B beefs has grown to staggering, if not laughable heights: Usher has taken shots at Chris Brown. Ne-Yo and Trey Songz had a spat. Etta James dissed Beyoncé. Mariah Carey's song Obsessed takes shots at Eminem. Thespian/crooners Jamie Foxx and Terrence Howard got into a feud after Howard dissed Foxx's music.

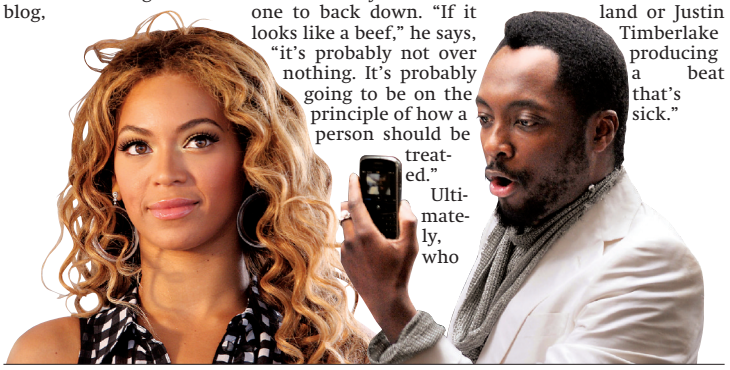
And we can't ignore how ridiculous the Black Eyed Peas' spat with blogger Perez Hilton was earlier this week.

Naturally, some rivalry among entertainers is to be expected. Yet the general reaction among the people hearing beefs unfold is that there's something fundamentally absurd — so West Side Story — about seeing song and dance singers squabble. "It's ridiculous to think of guys and girls singing about love and tenderness who dance in choreographed motions as tough," says Rashaun Hall, an entertainment journalist who has worked at Billboard, MTV News and Giant magazine before launching his own blog, rashaunhall.wordpress.com.

Chris Brown was rumored to have had a row with the Dream after the songwriter gave away a track Brown wanted. When we spoke to Dream, he wouldn't go into specifics about the incident, but says he's not one to back down. "If it looks like a beef," he says, "it's probably not over nothing. It's probably going to be on the principle of how a person should be treated."

Ultimately, who wants to hear singers' squabbles played out in song?

"Their bread and butter is slow jams, making people feel a certain way," says Hall. "So saying, 'Eff this person' isn't going to translate." Then again, it could he says, "if you got a hot track — a Timbaland or Justin Timberlake producing a beat that's sick."



will.i.am, right, is now acquainted with the world of beefs in the R&B community, something Beyoncé is well acquainted with.

Robbie Williams investigated

PAPARAZZI Police in the Bahamas are investigating the robbery of two paparazzi a few hours after they snapped shots of British pop idol Robbie Williams lounging on an exclusive beach in Exuma and argued with his entourage.

Police Supt. Ellsworth Moss said Wednesday that investigators had questioned Williams about the early Sunday robbery of the two celebrity photographers who travelled to Staniel Cay to sneak photos of the vacationing singer.

The paparazzi — Matt Sanchez of Splash News&Picture Agency and freelancer Carlos Mendez — told police they got into a shouting match with Williams' entourage while they photographed the star with zoom lenses.

Hours later, they alleged, four armed men broke into their rented room and stole $20,000 worth of cameras and other equipment.

Jazz festival kicks off

New and old artists set to play annual downtown event

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI
for Metro Canada

Sharon Jones and the Dap Kings play Nathan Phillips Square tonight.

As the old theater adage goes, "the show must go on." That's at least what organizers of the TD Canada Trust Toronto Jazz Festival have been saying since the city's garbage collectors went on strike earlier this week. But while downtown might smell a little worse than usual, the music at the 23rd fest more than makes up for any unseemly stenches.

Naturally, Patrick Taylor, the festival's executive director, thinks every year is a good one, but he points out that this year's lineup includes a lot of "new music" that he hopes will draw big crowds and introduce people to different sounds.

"Jazz isn't just traditional sounds form the 1920s and '30s," he says. "We'll hear new jazz — Medeski Martin and Wood, Sea and Cake, and we're introducing Melody Gardot."

Getting artists new and old to play isn't easy. Schedules often conflict, especially with bigger European festivals that often get first dibs. Taylor says they co-ordinate closely with other Canadian jazz festivals to do block bookings. So, Sonny Rollins isn't just playing tonight, he's also performing in Vancouver on the 29th and the Saskatchewan Jazz Festival on July 2.

One artist who Taylor's excited to see, and who's performing a few dates across Canada, is 53-year-old soul singer Sharon Jones and her band the Dap Kings. The New York-based artist has been playing music for decades, but this one-time prison guard and wedding band singer has only become well known in the last few years.

Jones, who is playing Nathan Phillips Square tonight, is thrilled to be on the Toronto bill, and on the festival circuit in general.

"We all like it because we play and then we're home. We play shows on Thursday to Saturday, and then we're back Monday," says the fast talking songstress. "What I don't like is when I have to use the port-a-potty."

Jones admits that getting through to people who don't know her music — which is a task almost all the musicians playing over the week have to do — can be challenging. However, her technique is to "make them know it. I always ask the question, how many of y'all are Sharon Jones virgins? Then I show them what I'm about."

And that's really the spirit of the festival, says Taylor. It's about people — regardless of the musical knowledge — getting together to discover new acts and appreciating not just jazz, but the other genres that are represented at the festival as well.

"The goal of the jazz festival is, no matter where you go, to keep the music alive and introduce the new artists," Taylor explains. "That's why every day there are workshops — these are for the laymen, to give everyone a better understanding of music's roots how it's played."

Festival details

- More than 350 artists will perform at the TD Canada Trust Toronto Jazz Festival starting today and running until July 5. Details at tojazz.com.

INFORMATION FEATURE

Professor Layton more than a game

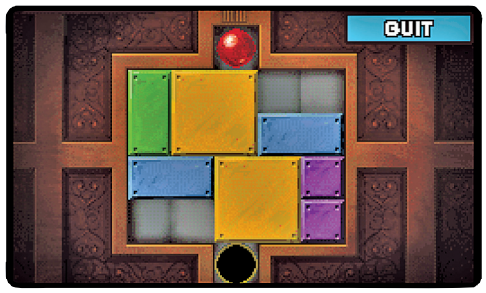
KATHY BUCKWORTH
for Metro Canada

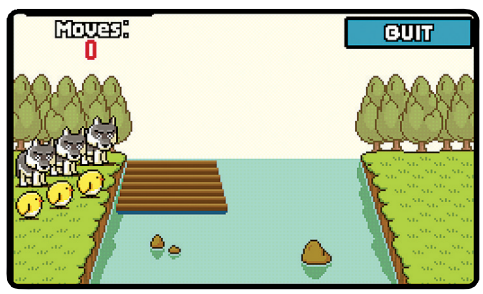
Until technology can auto-program Best Parenting Practices 2.0, Moms' lives will continue to be full of challenges, decisions and judgments that can leave us frustrated, challenged and downright perplexed.

Just once, it would be nice to solve a parenting puzzle and figure out the best way to move forward, and even find a prize at the end (which doesn't involve giving out a time out or contemplating boarding school).

Well, I think I've found the next best thing to help alleviate some of this pent-up frustration in not finding the "right" answer to every parenting challenge. It's an escape into a magical world where an enchanting village has an accompanying soundtrack of soft Paris-style café music, where one can meet charming gentlemen, and mingle with some upper-class ladies over tea. Oh, my kids have tried to go there with me ... but they can't. Because I'm the one holding the Nintendo DSi unit right now.

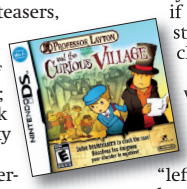
Professor Layton and the Curious Village is more than a game — it's a story, an experience, and a fresh relief from the day-to-day puzzles we face.





Professor Layton and the Curious Village gives Nintendo DSi players the chance to solve classic and original brainteasers.

As I worked my way around the charming village of St. Mystere, I was asked to help the professor and his young charge solve some classic and some original brainteasers, in order to earn coins, find pieces of old paintings; even track down a cranky cat.



I was understandably reluctant to pass the DSi to my kids — I just figured out I need to open that blue door! Give it back! Ten more minutes! What's great about this game is that many of the brainteasers can be redeployed on paper, for the kids to work on while I discover what's through the clock tower, and why that villager is so disagreeable.

Nintendo Canada's Matt Ryan says the game was developed with a family experience in mind.

"The puzzles in Professor Layton and the Curious Village can be solved by an individual but there is the opportunity to have fun as a group when you put your minds together," he says. "The characters are a laugh and the puzzles vary in difficulty ... don't worry, even if the whole family is stumped, you can use clues to help out."

"Don't worry, even if the whole family is stumped, you can use clues to help out." Matt Ryan

There's the classic wolf/chick crossing the river game, silly riddles involving candles that are "left over" at the end, and even a match stick dead dog. What more could you want?

Of course, as a busy mom, I only get to play the game in short bursts of time — darn kids and their homework, needing to be fed, and bedtime — so I love the fact that my progress in the game is recapped every time I start it up. I also like the fact that — unlike human children and most adults — the people in the story only talk to you when you tap them with the Nintendo pen. If only life could imitate this art.

My favourite puzzle so far has been the Bickering Brothers, whom I had to strategically place around a dinner table, with certain brothers only getting along with certain other brothers. I do this every night at the dinner table with my own four squabbling children, so I solved this one in no time flat. In the game, that is. I'm still working on the real life solution. And the release of Positive Parenting 3.0.

Get lost (and found)

Maze in the maize presents a challenge

Three easy steps to losing yourself in the sensory delights of summer: breathe deep, tilt your face to the sky and spread your arms wide. Now walk through the cornfield.

And lose yourself you will, twisting and turning through The Uxbridge Maze, where four hectares of lush, green corn grow as high as an elephant's eye. But don't worry if you can't find your way out.

"The coyotes will find you at the end of the season," laughs Steve Cooper, one of the masterminds behind what he calls "the most challenging maze in the GTA."

If you want a quick escape, just yell "Corn cops!" and orange-vested puzzle patrollers will put you on the right path.

Getting lost — and found — is all part of the fun at Cooper's CSA Farm near Mount Albert, about an hour northeast of Toronto. "It's amazing how many people just walk through with their hands reaching out to touch the corn," says Cooper. "It's a sensual experience."

That includes your sense of direction. "You have to work to get out," he promises. It's "real tough," full of circles and dead ends.

"We pride ourselves on having a real puzzle, not just a walk in the corn," says Cooper, who brainstorms with family members, staff and customers to come up with a new theme and design each year.

It's a maze of many moods. There's romance by the light of the silvery moon, when young couples seem to need longer than the average one hour to get through. And there's mystery, on a dark and cloudy night when only the flip of a cellphone provides a guiding light.

COOPER'S FARM

The giant maze on Steve Cooper's farm near Mount Albert can accommodate family games of hide-and-seek and romantic moonlight strolls.

The Coopers' corny sense of humour produces a bumper crop of brain teasers along the way. "Cornundrums" are picture puzzles that serve as markers so you know if you've covered the same ground twice. And strategically posted multiple-choice questions keep you on track if you get the answer right. Get it wrong and . . . well, forget about shortcuts. The 3.5-metre stalks are a tight 20 centimetres apart.

Cornfusion aside, city folk learn a thing or two about "what's going on out here," he says of the family's working farm with 16 hectares of fruit and vegetables, chickens, 300 goats and an on-site store. His wife Lisa and children Cayla, 14, and Trenton, 13, all pitch in.

For more information on the maze, go to uxbridgemaze.ca. For information on the farm, go to coopersfarm.ca.

Farms for fun

Everdale Organic Farm

With meadows, forests, a model home and an organic farm with livestock, bees and crops, Everdale's 20-hectare property is one big classroom for teaching sustainable living practices. Tours, workshops and kids' activities happen on the second Saturday of each month, June through September. (Hillsburgh, north of Brampton; 519-855-4859, everdale.org.)

Downey's Farm Market

Goats walking overhead are a main attraction at Downey's farm, which includes a winery and a barn packed with homegrown fruit and veggies, baked goods, jams and gifts. Great spot for family events and parties. (13682 Heart Lake Rd., north of Brampton; 905-838-2990, downeysfarm.com.)

Spinning Wheel Alpacas

These sweet-faced, fleecy creatures, raised by Nancy and Garth Hutchinson on their four-hectare farm, make for better wearing than eating. Their fibre is spun into cozy clothing, blankets and home accessories that are sold online and in the on-site store. Best to call ahead to arrange a visit. (1857 Regional Rd. 3, Enniskillen; 905-263-2098, spinningwheelalpacas.com.)

Andrews' Scenic Acres

This family farm grows 68 hectares of flowers, fruit and vegetables ripe for the picking — by you — right through the season. Take a wagon ride to the fields for rhubarb, strawberries, raspberries, cherries, elderberries and pumpkins, among other offerings. And don't forget to sample the fruit wines. (9365 10th Sideroad, Milton; 905-878-5807, andrewsscenicacres.com.)

Ontario outings

The Royal Botanical Gardens in Burlington, Ont., is holding its Rose Celebration this weekend and next.

Bloomin' marvellous

• Roses are notoriously finicky to grow, but you can always head out to the Royal Botanical Gardens in Burlington, Ont., if you want to see what the experts can accomplish. The RBG is throwing its Rose Celebration for the next two weekends, i.e. June 27- 28 and July 4-5, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at its Hendrie Park location. There, you'll find two acres of roses in a garden replete with all the colour, fragrance and classical beauty you could ask for. More specifically, there are about 2,000 modern hybrid roses and 650 shrub roses arranged to reflect the highlights of rose breeding. The garden includes old garden roses, modern garden roses, modern shrub roses and miniature roses. Climbing roses are included with other climbing plants on the pergola, and the Rose Walk showcases low maintenance roses with companion plants, and their versatility in the home landscape. As part of the Rose Celebration, there will also be live entertainment, childrens' activities and garden tours. For further information, visit rbg.ca.

Take a hike

• Considered one of the world's toughest team challenges, Oxfam Trailwalker is making it's North America debut in Ontario this summer. The event will take place July 24 to 26 on the Ganaraska Trail System, and requires serious physical fitness, as teams must hike 100 kilometres for 48 hours straight. Each team of four must also commit to raising $2,500. Two Canadian Olympic hopefuls, Craig Savill and Brent Laing, have created a team and are using the event as a training exercise in preparation for the Vancouver 2010 Games; see oxfamtrailwalker.ca. Beyoncé's first family fans

FAMOUS FANS Beyoncé had some special guests at her concert in Washington, D.C., usmagazine.com reports.

Michelle Obama brought daughters Malia and Sasha — along with her friends from Chicago and some of her White House staff — to the singer's show at the Verizon Center Wednesday night.

Before she belted Single Ladies (Put a Ring On It), Beyoncé gave a shout-out to the first daughters, the Washington Post reports.

"This is for Sasha and Malia — and all my single ladies!" she said.

This isn't the first time Beyoncé has performed for the Obama family. She sang the classic song, At Last, for the Obamas during their first dance on inauguration night in January.

Shortly after the inauguration festivities, Beyoncé told Vogue magazine that Michelle considered her a role model for her girls.

"She told me she was very happy that her girls have someone like me to look up to," Beyoncé said. "And I'm like, 'Oh, my God.' You have to feel fortunate to be one of the people whom parents don't mind their children looking up to."

Kendra can't hardly wait

HONEYMOON PLANS Kendra Wilkinson will honeymoon on a private island because she wants to be able to walk around naked, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

The former Playboy Playmate — who is set to wed football star Hank Baskett Saturday — is looking forward to relaxing in the secluded spot as no one will be able to see her.

She explained: "We're keeping the honeymoon destination a secret. It's a private island, I want to be able to walk around naked if I want and not have paparazzos!"

Wilkinson can't wait to tie the knot at the Playboy mansion, the home of her ex-boyfriend Hugh Hefner.

"I'm so excited! I'm ready to run down the aisle and jump on Hank!" she said.

Wilkinson recently announced she is expecting her first child with Baskett, and admits being pregnant has had a strange effect on her body.

She explained: "I've been craving hot cheese sauce. I'm not afraid to eat. It's so weird. I used to eat all vegetables before I was pregnant, but now I can't even think of vegetables.

Katy really, really loves pizza

A REAL FOOD LOVER Katy Perry set her fans' appetites racing recently when she posted a photo to her Twitter account of herself naked in a hotel bathtub, her body obscured by a tray holding a pizza.

"Why is it that after not eating for three days all I can think of is food," she wrote. "Food is smiling at me ... luring me with sexual seduction."

The singer had been recuperating in Milan for three days after a bout of the flu.

Murder charges for Billy Bob's daughter

TURN OF EVENTS Billy Bob Thornton's daughter has been charged with first-degree murder, female-first.co.uk reports.

Amanda Brumfield — who is estranged from her actor father — was also indicted on aggravated child abuse and aggravated manslaughter charges on Wednesday, following the death of a one-year-old girl in her care in Florida last October.

The 29-year-old — who was charged with child neglect causing harm or disability earlier this month — was booked at the Orange County jail.

When she was initially arrested, Brumfield reportedly told police the child died after sustaining a head injury following a fall from a playpen. It is alleged she did not call for help for two-and-a-half hours.

An autopsy showed the youngster had a fractured skull and a brain injury, prompting the death to be ruled a homicide, the website adds.

Rachel asks for privacy

PRIVATE PAIN Rachel Hunter is begging the media leave her in peace as she struggles to come to terms with her broken engagement.

Rod Stewart's ex-wife, 39, was due to marry Canadian hockey star Jarret Stoll in California in August, but the 27-year-old reportedly called off the wedding this week, without giving his bride-to-be any explanation.

Hunter's representative has now confirmed the breakup, and is asking the press to let the model deal with her troubles away from the spotlight.

A statement reads, "The August wedding of Rachel Hunter and Jarret Stoll has been cancelled and the couple have decided to split. We ask you (the media) to respect Rachel and her family's privacy during this extremely upsetting time."

Jackie O and Brando?

SECRET TRYST? A new book claims that actor Marlon Brando and former U.S. first lady Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis shared a passionate affair in 1964, something Brando had wanted to include in his 1994 memoir.

But an editor at Random House who was friends with the former first lady encouraged him to leave the details out, according to Page Six.

"I'm not sure she knew what she was doing sexually, but she did it well," Brando wrote, according to an excerpt from the new book.

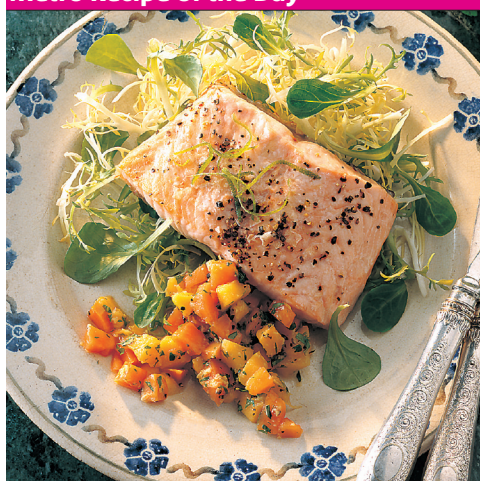
Metro Recipe of the Day



Salmon with Tropical Fruit Salsa

INGREDIENTS:
4 salmon steaks
1 tbsp (15 ml) olive oil
SALSA:
1 small mango
1 small papaya
1in. (2.5cm) piece fresh ginger
Handful of mint leaves
1 lime
Salt and black pepper
METHOD:
1. Preheat grill to moderate and cover rack with foil.
2. For salsa, cut mango in half, remove flesh, dice finely and put into bowl. Cut papaya in half, scoop out and discard seeds, finely dice flesh and add to mango.
3. Peel ginger and grate into bowl. Rinse, dry and chop mint and add to bowl.
4. Wash wax off lime. Remove few shreds of zest for garnish. Grate the rest and add to salsa. Squeeze juice and add half to bowl, reserving remainder.
5. Season salsa with salt and plenty of pepper; mix well.
6. Put salmon steaks, skin sides down, onto foil on broiler rack. Brush with olive oil, season and sprinkle with remaining lime juice. Broil 6–8 minutes without turning. fish is done when flesh flakes easily.
7. Serve grilled salmon garnished with lime zest and accompanied by salma.

CANCER ♋
JUNE 22-JULY 22
Give your imagination permission to roam and don't reject what it comes up with just because it seems so outrageous.

LEO ♌
JULY 23-AUG 23
According to the planets you are very close to the tipping point, where one small adjustment or alteration somehow changes everything.

VIRGO ♍
AUG 24-SEPT 22
The more someone points out your errors, the more likely it is they are trying to destroy your confidence — and the more determined you must be.

LIBRA ♎
SEPT 23-OCT 23
You may have big plans for the next few months but as mind planet Mercury is at odds with Saturn today you are strongly advised to wait.

SCORPIO ♏
OCT 24-NOV 22
You are not the sort to take much notice of alternative arguments but someone will give you some seriously good advice today.

SAGITTARIUS ♐
NOV 23-DEC 21
Not everything may be going your way at the moment but the world is still a beautiful place and there are still enough heroes to inspire you.

CAPRICORN ♑
DEC 22-JAN 20
You may have no solid evidence that someone is trying to cheat you but your instincts are screaming at you to be on your guard.

AQUARIUS ♒
JAN 21-FEB 18
You may not be the world's best at working with other people but, like it or not, you are part of a team.

PISCES ♓
FEB 19-MARCH 20
No matter what unfounded rumours a certain individual may have been spreading you must not bear a grudge.
